American World Policies

By WALTER E. WEYL

Author of "The New Democracy"

Cloth, 12 mo. $2.25.

The United States is deeply concerned with the peace which is to be made in Europe, and with the Great Society to be re-constituted after the war. With world influence come new responsibilities, opportunities and dangers. "The American World Policies" seeks, on the basis of economic researches, to define our national attitude towards Expansion, Imperialism, the Organization of Peace, the Establishment of International Government, and, more particularly, our proper relations to the Monroe Doctrine, Mexico, China, Japan, the British Empire, the little and big nations of Europe, and the rule of the sea. The book relates our foreign policy to our internal problems, to the clash of industrial classes and of political parties, to the decay of sectionalism and the slow growth of a national sense. It is a study of "Americanism" from without and within.

Universal Training for Citizenship and Public Service

By WILLIAM H. ALLEN
Director of the Institute for Public Service.

$1.50

This book is an attempt to formulate for lay-students of public affairs certain minimum aims and steps which are entirely within the reach of the general public. In addition to listing minimum essentials that are necessary in training privates for citizenship, it discusses briefly other minimum essentials of training for drill-masters, for volunteer civic work, for entering and remaining in the public service, for the professions and for officers in public and semi-public services. Three further chapters indicate the country's need for specialized training for parenthood, for public spirited use of special gifts, and for creative devoted attention to the country's up-building after the war.

Japan in World Politics

By K. K. KAWAKAMI

Cloth, 12mo. $1.50.

This volume marks a timely contribution to one of the most important problems now confronting the United States — its relation with Japan. The author, a native Japanese, is thoroughly familiar with the topics which he treats and to them he brings much fresh information. Among the chapters are found considerations of such questions as America’s Issues with Japan, Is America Preparing Against Japan?, Land Hunger, The Background of the Immigration Question, Japanese Immigration to America, The Pacific Coast and the Japanese, The Ex-patriation of the Japanese, The Open Door in China, Japan and America in China, Japanese “Designs” upon Mexico, America and the Anglo-Japanese Alliance and America and German Japanese Relations.
