Early Leaders in Movement for Good Roads

John Conway was one of the State's Pioneers

Back in 1911 the Wisconsin legislature passed the first state aid highway law and Governor Francis E. McReynolds immediately appointed a highway commission consisting of W. O. Hotchkiss and F. E. Turnearne of the university of Wisconsin, Jacob VanDorn of Baraboo, John S. Owen of Eau Claire and John A. Hazelwood of Jefferson, chairman. A. R. Hirst was the first engineer under the original commission. These men, and particularly Hazelwood, Hotchkiss and Hirst, stand out as the leaders in the early development of the highways. Few people appreciate the hard work and privations that they were compelled to endure. In fact there was very little sentiment and not much money to be had for good roads.

But scattered throughout the state were a few hardy souls who could see far enough into the future to realize that the coming of the automobile and whenever members of the state highway commission came to the Fox River valley John chafed them around.

In the picture he is shown in the driver's seat, with Mr. Hazelwood at his side, while Mr. Hirst, Mr. VanDorn and Mr. Owen ride in the back seat. Many and rough were the miles this quartet bumped over the old roads to gauge the needs and possibilities of the roads that were talked.

It was largely due to the untiring efforts of Mr. Conway that the good roads movement attained such headway in Outagamie county and in 1914 and 1915 he started the campaign which resulted in the first bond issue of $700,000 for the construction of permanent highways in Outagamie county. At that time Mr. Conway dreamed of a million dollar highway to connect Appleton with Milwaukee, but everybody thought that was just a dream.

The Trail of '98

BY ROBERT W. SERVICE

The hardships, the peril, the romance of the Klondike trail are told by one who traveled it. The poet has turned novelist and gives us a love story in which tender romances with rough adventure, humor, pathos and love are woven into a tapestry of humor and excitement of “The Creation of Sam McKee” and “The Imaging of Dan McGrew” and “The Outlawing of Dan McGrew” are parallel in almost every chapter.

Short Trips of Interest
Just a Few Miles Away from Appleton

A week-end beginning with a holiday on Friday is sure to bring with it some excursion on every main highway. Many drivers plan to take advantage of the three-day vacation to plan a longer trip, or the ordinary two week-end permits. Drivers from Illinois and points south seize the opportunity to drive to the northland for a day’s fishing. The result is a mad scramble on the main highways and any one out for a leisurely afternoon is decidedly out of luck if he attempts to find it on the main roads.

But there are many nice drives in the neighborhood which can be enjoyed in a leisurely manner, without fighting heavy traffic or eating dust all the time. One of these trips, which can be comfortably taken in a few hours, will only show you a few miles of pavement, but it will take you over excellent gravel roads, with beautiful scenery, and very little traffic.

Follow 47 to Markell and turn west here, following the road west along the north boundary of the Bear Creek Flat, until you come to the pavement leading to Shiocton from Stephenville. Turn to the left to Stephenville, a quarter mile away, and in the middle of the village take the road to the west. Two blocks west, then turn north about one-half mile and follow straight west to New London. On the way you go through the Wolf River valley, crossing the river itself. In the low lands many beautiful flowers will be seen in season, some of them of varieties rarely seen elsewhere and almost extinct. Then past fertile farms and the Mosquito hills to enter New London through the mill yard of the Hat ten Lumber company. Continue west along the main street until you come to Highway 54, where you turn left (to the south) and cross the bridge. One block beyond the bridge turn east for only a short distance and then continue south until you hit county trunk “W”, which will take you past the cemetery, through fertile farm lands and along the side of a high ridge where you have a splendid view of the country to the west and densely wooded hills to the east, until you come to Readfield.

Continue on “W” through Readfield, the road running in a general south-easterly direction about eight miles to Winchester. Shortly before reaching Winchester you find yourself on a paved highway which you follow to and through the village, taking the first turn to the north to leave the pavement and the crowd. Continue north for miles and two then turn east again, continuing in an easterly direction until you come out on the highway running past the Butte des Morts golf course to Neenah. Turn north and follow the highway back to Appleton.

The entire trip is only about sixty miles. It goes over only a few miles of concrete, but the gravel roads are in excellent condition, except for a short stretch south of Readfield where the road crew has been working. But even then the road is in such condition that no one need experience any trouble, and the scenery and freedom from other traffic will more than compensate for the necessity of reducing speed to twenty-five miles per hour. Besides, we are planning a leisurely afternoon, and if you take the trip that way you will not travel at much greater speed at any time—your lunch and enjoy the scenery, watch the birds, and thank that person who suggested a road on which you could drive without hitting up a mud path to keep in line or eating clouds of dust raised by the fellow in a frantic hurry to get somewhere else. Try it for a change. You will be pleased.

Farmers and City Folks in Get-Together Meeting
Lions Club and Greenville Grange Have Pleasant Session

The annual get-together meeting of the local Lions club and the South Greenville Grange was held Monday evening at Grange hall in Greenville. A dinner served by the ladies of the Grange, Rudolph Schaefer was the first speaker. He explained the aims and objects of the Grange and urged cooperation between city and country folk as the best means of progress for both. The principal speaker of the evening was John D. Jones, Jr., of Madison and former Commissioner of Agriculture in Wisconsin. In his talk he discussed the farmer’s problems and stressed the fact that he is confronted with the same problems as the manufacturer, in addition to having many problems peculiarly his own. While the whole world is dependent upon the farmer, the farmer is at the hands of the middle men, who exploit him without mercy. The prices he receives for his products are controlled and manipulated by the middle man and the farmer is always on the short end. Until some means of regularization are developed, this will continue to be the case. Mr. Jones also stressed the importance of cooperation and better understanding between farm and city folk as the surest means of improving conditions for both, and recommended that more such meetings be held to promote better acquaintance.

Other features of the program were the special entertainment provided by Bob Connelly and Martin VanRooy, and a xylophone solo by Ed. Melz, accompanied by Vilas Gehlin, pianist.

The state conservation commission has cut its budget for next year by about $400,000.

Local Guard Units to Leave for Camp Saturday
The local guard company, officially known as Company D, 127th Infantry, Wisconsin National Guard, and the 100th Field Artillery Band have completed all arrangements and are ready to entrain Saturday morning for Camp Douglas, where they will spend the next two weeks. The band will leave on the Northwestern at 8:15, while the machine gun company will depart via the 800 Line at 9 A.M. Both will return to Appleton Saturday, July 19.

Last year the machine gun company covered itself with glory at the encampment, returning with the trophies for machine gun combat firing and for the best kitchen organization which they had also taken the year before. They have been working hard in preparation for the camp and are confident that they will again bring back both trophies this year.

Friends of the company have been invited to visit the boys during the encampment, especially on Governor’s Day, which will be observed on Sunday, July 18. Special rates are offered by the railroads for this occasion.

Man in the course of business. He really does know the business from the bottom up.

Captain Saul of the Southern Cross can testify to man's progress in transportation. As navigator of the Southern Cross he flew the Atlantic in two days.

Some years ago he made his first Atlantic crossing in a square rigged sailing vessel, and was six months on the journey.

In spite of that, many still doubt that ocean air travel will ever "become practical."

Children of today will ask about "the old days when people crossed the ocean on the water," as they now ask about stage coach days.

And those now living will cross Europe for about $10.

Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt says: "Character building begins in the cradle." Parents should train children from their babyhood.

An old English horse trainer, asked "When should I begin training my colt," and told that the colt was three weeks old, said: "You have lost the three most important weeks."

Children should be trained with kindness and explanation, never with whipping or other brutality, from babyhood.

But don't waste too much time correcting and nagging concerning faults that the child will outgrow with time; and not otherwise.

More serious, from the imperial point of view, is the disastrous slump in cotton prices on the Bombay markets. Price restrictions have been withdrawn and many failures of cotton merchants are expected.

Wall Street wit which described broker opening his order book, revealing several momas, now says, "Constructive forces are now in the saddle, but the saddle is not on the horse."

That talk is pleasing to the busy bears, but saddle and horse may be together soon and bears less happy.

Ahn Hoever, son of the president, bought a set of union overalls and has gone to work in a New Jersey plant of the American Radiator company. He wants to learn the manufacturing business from the bottom on.

August Klettke Dies of Injuries

August Klettke, 66, a farmer living west of the city, was struck by a car driven by Mrs. Louis Peters, route 1, Appleton, on Monday morning and so badly injured that he died Tuesday morning at the hospital.

He was driving a team and engaged in dragging cement blocks along the highway when the accident occurred as the team turned from Badger avenue onto Wisconsin avenue. As Mrs. Peters sounded her horn he attempted to jump aside, but was struck by the car, knocked down and run over. He was at once rushed to the hospital but the doctors were unable to save his life.

Mrs. Peters, who was accompanied by Frank Giesing and Arthur Schenk, was on the way home from the hospital where she had been visiting her husband. The latter is in a serious condition as a result of injuries received in an altercation over ownership of a barn of hers.

August Klettke was 66 years old and leaves three sons, Walter, Harvey and Clarence; four daughters, Irene Klettke, Mrs. Loretta Kuehn and Mrs. Otto Sager of Appleton, Mrs. William Sigl of Black Creek; nine grandchildren; two brothers, Herman in Appleton and William in Ellington; two sisters, Mrs. Minnie Mauk and Mrs. Bertha Lange in Appleton. The funeral will be held at the residence Saturday afternoon at 1:30 and from Zion Lutheran church at 2 o'clock. Rev. Theo. Martin will officiate.

HONOR THE STARS AND STRIPES
It is rather distressing to find out how little reverence or respect many so-called good Americans have for their most important patriotic customs—not just customs but duties. Quite a few of our own citizens seem to take it for granted that our flag is just a means of decoration—something to put on the car on holidays, and something that adds color and spice to a parade. They do not look on Old Glory as an emblem, almost sacred—one which should at all times demand the utmost attention, respect and devotion.

Last week Appleton had the privilege of playing host to hundreds of men who fought for our flag and sacrificed much for it back in 1898. One of the big features of this splendid gathering was the parade on Friday afternoon. Thousands of men and women lined both sides of the streets to watch this impressive procession. Most of the men had hats on. When the flag of their country was borne proudly along at the head of the procession and passed by these onlookers many of them (altogether too many) never moved a finger to take their hats off their rather thick heads and stand at attention. Had it been war time—about twelve years ago, when patriotic fervor was at high pitch—the hats would have been removed for them, and none too gently. Should our flag be shown any less respect in time of peace? How quickly we forget!

On this same day a circus exhibit in Appleton. The last feature on the program was in the nature of an historical pageant and at least three times “Old Glory” was carried past the audience by those representing various periods in the history of our nation. Most of those men who had worn their hats during the course of the performance never thought of taking them off at this time. Not even any applause when our flag was carried. Our “good” citizens just sat there like a group of petrified fossils, and stared blankly ahead.

Probably these men don’t leave their hats on because they especially want to when the occasion comes for removing them. It is undoubtedly carelessness or thoughtlessness. But who can condone thoughtlessness in such an important matter? Such an excuse sounds altogether out of place when it comes to a matter of respect for the flag of our country.

Tomorrow is July 4th and Appleton is to observe it with a parade and an all-day celebration. There will be at least one, probably several flags in the line of march. Will the male spectators uncover their heads when the colors go by or will many of them just stand there, hat and all, as though their flag was nothing more to them than a few strips of colored cloth? We hope these words will be heeded.

OUR SENTIMENTS ALSO
The Antigo Journal makes the following terse comment on the recent trip of the rural school graduates to Washington which expresses our sentiments exactly:

“Superintendent of Schools A. G. Meating of Outagamie county probably did more to advertise Wisconsin last week than has been done for a long time. In taking 1500 school children and parents to Washington and back in a twenty coach train, he made an outstanding contribution to education. This trip will probably mark the supreme event in the lives of not only the school children but their parents as well who made the trip.

“United States history is a thrilling story but it can never be made to mean quite as much as a trip to Washington, having their pictures taken with President Hoover on the White House lawn and making a visit to Mt. Vernon and Arlington. The people of the whole state are indebted to Sup't. Meating for his unique accomplishment which sets a record that few can equal.”

VALUABLE TRAINING
In Oshkosh recently a small girl was rescued from drowning by several boys, two of whom were Boy Scouts. The news reports show that the girl’s life was saved because the two Boy Scouts had had life saving and resuscitation training and knew how to apply their knowledge when the emergency arose. This is only one example of the many valuable lessons learned in scouting.

If you have a 12-year-old boy in your home who is not a Boy Scout, encourage him to take advantage of this excellent training. Then, when he is a Scout, don’t make it hard for him to be a real one. When meeting night rolls around be sure nothing interferes with his attendance.

When there’s an extra patrol meeting, rally practice or a test to pass, be as lenient as circumstances will permit in allowing him time out in the evening. It will all be time well spent, and if you mothers and fathers follow his work through from Tenderfoot to Eagle Scout, you will also benefit.

MORE BRAKES, LESS HORN
That is the slogan in the safety drive warning motorists in Milwaukee, and that’s one of the things that is just as good in Appleton as it is in Milwaukee.

School vacations are on and several hundred thousand children have been released for play for the summer. In spite of back yards, parks, vacant lots and playgrounds, some children will be playing in or near the streets. By the law of averages some of these will be seriously injured in automobile accidents. Children get absorbed in their games, are impulsive, forgetful, thoughtless. Impressions made by teaching safety rules in school will grow dim.

So it is up to their elders, all drivers of automobiles, to use the utmost care in the residence sections, on the less frequented streets as well as on the highways where traffic is congested. In these streets children are less watchful of automobiles and are more apt to be hurt. That puts the burden of care almost entirely on the driver. “Go slow. Children near.”

Wouldn’t it be a fine thing, if we could keep our streets clear of all accidents this summer! Let’s try, everybody.

SPEED ON THE CURVES
Modern highway engineers have been working to eliminate the danger at curves by making them more sweeping, so that auto can take them at high speeds. But while they succeeded in speeding up the traffic they have failed signally in eliminating the danger. Drivers seem unable to learn that there is a limit to the speed at which an auto can be driven around any curve, no matter how wide and sweeping it may be.

Only last week a young man was killed near Oshkosh when he went into the ditch on a curve. The fact that his car turned over several times is eloquent testimony to the speed at which it was travelling.

Speed on the straight-away is always so accompanied by danger; but speed on the curves multiplies the danger many fold because of additional strain on all parts, and especially on the tires and steering gear. There is a limit to what even the modern cars and tires can stand. The drivers who are content to keep within reasonable limits in their desire to get somewhere else as quickly as possible are the ones who will be following the funeral procession of the men who never learned that too much speed on the curves often entails death and destruction with it.

SAVE A TREE
Highway commissioners of three Wisconsin counties and chairmen of three townships have voted to save a magnificent elm from the desire of motorists for speed.

Near St. Ann where three roads meet and Sheboygan, Fond du Lac and Calumet counties touch there is an ancient giant elm. It is twelve feet and four inches in circumference, eighty feet, or more, in height with his lowest limb forty feet from the ground. To carry out highway department plans wide the road the tree would have to be cut down. Authorities held a session beneath it and decided to buy land on all sides and form a small triangular park with the elm standing conspicuously in the center and roadway on three sides.

It took more than a century to grow this tree and the commissioners are to be commended for deciding to save it from the ax.

Construction is the backbone of business.

Mrs. Lloyd Funnell, president of the chapter, will be chairman of the picnic committee.

The June business meeting was followed by a social, card prizes having been won by Mrs. Anna Doerfler and Mrs. Anna Wetengel at schafskopf, and Mrs. Katherine Otto and Mrs. Doris Brown at bridge.

All grand officers of the Grand Colony of Beavers were re-elected at the convention held at Madison last week. Mrs. George Eberhardt was the delegate from the Appleton district, Paul de Grand was awarded the next meeting, which will be held in 1934.

Mrs. F. J. Foreman is representing the Appleton chapter, Women of Mooseheart, Legion, at the forty-second annual convention at Mooseheart, Ill. The convention opened June 28 and will close tomorrow.

Conferring of degrees was the principal business conducted at the Odd Fellow lodge meeting Friday evening. Grand Herald J. W. Washburn, of the Grand Encampment of Marineette, was a guest.

Eighty-five members of the Catholic Order of Foresters attended the st. picenic held at Dietzen's park, Darboy, Sunday. A picnic lunch was served at the park. A baseball game, between the regular team, captained by George Beck, and a picked team, captained by Henry Tillman, was a feature of the entertainment. The game was won by the regulars by an 8 to 6 score.

Routine business was enacted at the regular meeting of Komone Lodge, Order of Odd Fellows, at their hall Monday evening.

SOPHIE TUCKER SINGS HITS IN "HONKY TONK"

A dual existence is led by Sophie Tucker in "Honky Tonk," Warner Bros. latest, talking, singing Vitaphone production—showing at Warner Bros. Appleton theatre Friday and Saturday in which she makes her initial appearance as a screen star, after many years as the premiere "red hot mamma" of the stage. Though she is the principal entertainer in a notorious night club, the story reveals that she is in reality a lover of home, and merely follows her vocation that her daughter may be maintained in a fashionable European school.

STRONG COLOR TYPES MAKE BEST TECHNICOLORE SUBJECTS

Decidingly, bronzed, shapely reds and reds are the best screen types to succeed in Technicolor pictures. Players whose figures present strong color contrasts also have an excellent chance for success. This is the word passed out by John Francis Dillon, who directed his second all-Technicolor picture in "Pride of the Regiment," First National's historic spectromantic spectacle film, which opens with the midnight show Saturday night at Warner Bros. Appleton theatre, showing through Tuesday. Dillon also directed "Sally," Color camera photographs, strong colors best, while mixed and pale colors frequently do not register clearly.

Miss Segal, from the musical stage, is portraying a leading role in "Pride of the Regiment," with Allan Prior appearing opposite. She has light blonde hair, deep blue eyes, and a fair complexion, he explained. Color tests are becoming another difficult hurdle for film aspirants to get over. In addition to having good screen personalities and photographing well, they must have good color possibilities. "Pride of the Regiment" is based on the stage musical play, "The Lady in Ermine." The story is which takes place in Italy during the Austro-Italian war of 1918. Humphrey Pearson and Ray Harris adapted it for the screen.

Walter Pidgeon, Louise Fazenda, Fred Steele, Myrna Loy, Lupino Lane, Harry Cording and Claude Fleming support Miss Segal and Prior.

VARIED LOCALES IN "MURDER WILL OUT"

The action in "Murder Will Out," First National and Vitaphone production which is booked for a two-day run at Warner Bros. Appleton theatre beginning Wednesday starts in a bachelor flat and has an exclusive club, a deserted highway, a Chinese pagoda on an eulogize country estate, a police detective bureau, a doctor's office, a cemetery at midnight, a United States weather bureau, a morgue, New York harbor and the interior of a submarine as its locales. "Murder Will Out," which is an adaptation of "The Purple Hieroglyph" by Murray Leinster, satirizes the many melodramatic murder mysteries that have recently found their way to the talking screen. At the same time it manages to retain the punch and breathless suspense that have made mysteries popular with the movie-going public.

The picture boasts an unusually capable cast of well-known players.

Vacation Bible School Completes Season's Work

The Vacation Bible school, which is conducted annually by the First Baptist church, completed its season's work with a demonstration and exhibition at the church Sunday. The demonstration work included memory work, songs, and plays presented during the Sunday school hour. The handwork, which consisted of soap carving, posters, and art of all kinds was on display during the day. Sixty-five pupils were enrolled in the summer Bible school, practically all of whom took part in the Sunday program. The school was under the direction of the Rev. E. Hasselblad, pastor of the church.

Each member will bring a basket lunch. Miss Amanda Engol and Mrs. Ralph Schwerke have charge of the affair.

Standing committees for the ensuing year were elected at the June meeting of the Senior Youth People's society of St. Paul Lutheran church. Miss Leona Lemburg is chairman of the entertainment committee; Winfred Schultz, educational leader; Miss Hilda Harm, membership chairman; Miss Margaret Leesering, recreation committee chairman. The Senior and Junior societies of the church are planning a joint picnic at North Park, Oshkosh, July 27.

What They Say

On Chewing Gum
Editor Review: — When the Boy Scouts marched in the parade to the cemetery on Memorial Day, I noticed that several of them, in uniforms, were chewing gum. This made a very poor impression and I sincerely hope that it will not be repeated when they march in the parade on the Fourth.

A Mother

The Railroad Crossing in Our Town
Editor Review: — Some time ago you had an editorial about the condition of the railroad crossings in town and a week or so later you printed a new item saying that the railroad was going to fix up the crossings. Somebody must have been "kidding you" because several weeks have passed since that statement was made and nothing has been done. The condition of these crossings is a disgrace to our city and it is up to the city authorities to take action without further delay.

Arterial Jumpers
Editor Review: — In your editorial last week entitled "Stop for Arterials!" you seemed to have the impression that the man driving on an arterial always has the right of way. This is by no means the case. The law requires him to exercise the same care and caution as on any other street and if states that after coming to a stop the man entering the arterial has the same rights as the man on the arterial. The law takes for granted that auto drivers have common sense and use it, but that is where the law makes its mistake, because the great majority of drivers do not seem to know what common sense is. There can be no excuse for accidents like the one near Forest Junction recently which cost four lives. The country on both sides of that intersection is open and both drivers could see the other for a long distance before reaching the intersection. Evidently each took for granted the other would stop, and as a result four were killed. Last night I was out driving with my family and at an arterial corner within the city limits a big car dashed into the arterial, uttering the stop signs and narrowly missing three other cars which were driving at a leisurely pace on the arterial. No policeman was around and in the confusion and excitement nobody got the license number and he disappeared before we had recovered. That is the kind of driving that causes the accidents and drivers of that sort ought not to be let off with a $1.00 fine for jumping an arterial. That driver jeopardized the health of a number of people just because he was in a hurry.

—Seared.

For the Attention of Mr. Schmiege
Editor Review: — Mr. Oscar E. Schmiege, our part time assemblyman and assistant district attorney, attended the convention of the Wisconsin District Attorneys' association at Waunakee last week. As usual he managed to get into the spot light and is quoted by Milwaukee papers as making the following statements: "We have cleaned up Outagamie county, but we had to post a sheriff to do it!" * * *

"I have gone out with an officer and made raids myself. Once we caught two deputy sheriffs running (lot) machines. That is not the district attorney's duty. When he does it he is interfering with the sheriff's duties and unless conditions are very bad I would not recommend that he do it."

Now that Mr. Schmiege has "cleaned up" Outagamie county, perhaps he will have some time to devote to investigating the rumors about conditions in the county highway department. The stories about conditions in that department during the past ten years are too serious and too specific to be permitted to pass unnoticed. If they are true, guilty parties should be punished before the crimes have been outlawed by time. If the stories have no foundation in fact, thorough and impartial investigation followed by full publicity of the facts is the only way to restore public confidence. The department has recently been reorganized, but it still carries the underlings of public opinion of the previous administration and for its own protection should insist upon a full and impartial investigation, so that Mr. Schmiege is not likely to meet with opposition from its members.

—First Warder.

Another Letter for Mr. Schmiege
Editor Review: — Recently John Lamers of Little Chute was brought before Judge Berg on a charge of drunken driving. Circumstances must have been pretty bad because the judge forgot his law and imposed a reduced penalty that Lamers did not appeal, by the city ordinance under which Lamers was brought into court. Lamers' attorney seized upon this technicality and secured a writ of habeas corpus; that the man was released from the more severe part of his sentence, imprisonment. The citizens of Outagamie county do not want of-fenders to escape punishment because of legal technicalities. If lawyers are once permitted to get away with anything like that we will soon have the same disregard for the law as now exists in Chicago.

If Mr. Schmiege is sincere about cleaning up Outagamie county, as he told the state association of district attorneys in Waunakee last week, let him show his sincerity by proceeding against Lamers under the state statute, so that the judge can impose the sentence which he thought the offense deserved. The judge is entitled to that cooperation.

The TRAIL of '98
A NORTHLAND ROMANCE
by ROBERT W. SERVICE
INSTALLMENT 1
As for back as I can remember I have been conscious of a yearning for romance. It has given color to my life, made me a dreamer of dreams, a visionary, a poet of romance. As a child I would climb the wild heather hills, I have heard the glad shouts of the football players in the stranger lands. And face their perils and leave their dangers. The joy of the thought of life and the scenes and sounds
I could see the day when the roads of dance and change would be open to my feet.
It is strange that in all these years
I rendered few in one, Garry, who was my very soul, my friend, would have laughed at me in the foster-ship of my life. You would never have known of his brothers. He was the handsomest boy I have ever seen, fair and winning, while I was dark, dear and none too selfish. He was clever, practical and ambitious, excelling in all his studies, besides, except in those which applied to his future occupations, I was dull and a dreamer.
Yet I loved each other as few brothers.
No, excepting mother, Garry knew better than any one has ever done, and I loved him for it. It seems over twenty years since the boy in me was very shy, but he did not have a fault: tenderness, humor, enthusiasm, sympathy and the beauty of a young soul—all that which makes a lively child. He was forever expressed in this brother of mine.
Our home was an ideal one; Garry,
tall, fair and winsome; myself, dark, dreamy, reticent; and between us, linking all these together in perfect harmony was our gentle, delicate mother.
Mother must have worried a good deal over my future. Garry was the youngideal, and I was but an idler, a knickerbocker without any strength. At last I told her I wanted to go abroad, and then it seemed as if a great difficulty was solved. I was glad that I should be of a cousin, and Garry boomed up with reproachful vividness.
I was, too, a seeker of curious experience, and this was to prove my undoing. One foggy midnight, coming from the Pacific Avenue sketches, I was elated shrewdly from behind and dropped most neatly in the water. I woke up, and then I found I had been robbed of my pocketbook and nearly all my money was lost. Fortunately I had left my watch in the hotel safe, and by selling it I was entirely restituted; but the situation forced me from my citadel of pleasant dreams, and confronted me with the grim realities of life.

An attractive table can be arranged with favors in the form of candy firecrackers, torpedoes, pinwheels and similar confections. Snappers of red crepe paper laid at each place are decorative and add to the gaiety of a party. The centerpiece may have some historical suggestion. One hostess created a Banker Hill by encrusting a mound of moss with an American flag worked out in red and white phlox blossoms with a field of blue bachelor buttons.

For This Week-End
Fourth of July, Saturday, Sunday—three days in a row for holiday making, family gatherings, or what you will. An opportunity of which relatives and friends living at a distance will take advantage. If it is sunny and warm, as it is apt to be, why not serve at least one meal out of doors? Breakfast is delightful in the open and could be served into enough to suit family and guests.
Here is a menu suggested for such an occasion, which would also serve for a luncheon;
Red Raspberries with Sugar
Battered Eggs with Mushrooms
Tomatoes and Angel Fruit
Applesauce and Butter, with Cracked Ice

A garden filled with color and fragrance is the pride of many homes. The patriotic idea may be carried out in the refreshments served. Fresh sugar or molasses cookies may be cut in the shape of shieldes, frosted with white icing and then decorated, with a tiny brush dipped in harmless vegetable colorings, to simulate the red, white and blue. Served on a white doily on a blue plate these are effective.

Doughnuts, shaped into balls, may be piled up to resemble cannon balls and topped with a wee flag. Or this idea may be carried out by rolling balls of fondant, or any candy, with candied fruit and nut centers, in melted chocolate. Almond paste balls are especially delicious this way. These may be used by themselves as a bon bon, or as a garnish for fancy iced cakes or iced cream puddings.

Cherries, red, white, or black, lend themselves to all sorts of decorative uses. They may enter into a substantial dish by being molded into comports with rice. Stem and pit some sound, ripe cherries and cook for about fifteen minutes in a syrup made of three cupsful of water to one pound of sugar. Add to cool, then fold in a buttermilk mold with cooked rice, place it out carefully and cut an opening in the center large enough to hold the cherries. Garnish with fresh cherries with stems and leaves. Be sure they are immaculate.
If the day is hot you might try this;
Chiffonade Tea Punch
Make 4 cupsful strong tea; let it cool. Add the juice of 6 lemons and 1 fresh pineapple cut in small pieces, 1 pound fresh stewed cherries, 1 cupful granulated sugar. Mix all until sugar is dissolved. Then add 4 cupsful carbonated, or plain, water. Put into glass pitcher, add a sprig of mint and pour into glasses half filled with cracked ice. Serve with soft jumbles.
For the children make this now;
Chocolate Gingerbread
Mix well 1 cup molasses, ½ cup sour milk, 2 teaspoons soft butter, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in tablespoon cold water, 2 cups sifted with 1 teaspoon each of ginger and cinnamon, and 4 tbsp. grated chocolate. Bake in a loaf in a steady oven and ice with vanilla or chocolate icing.

Woodland Shrubs and Vines for Your Garden
There is something very fitting about using the native flowers, vines, shrubs, and trees for our gardens. They may not be so showy, here in the temperate zone, but, somehow, they fit perfectly into the landscape; harmonize with our less brilliant skies and air; and may be completely satisfying as a setting for our homes, or at least serve as dependable background for the more exotic things we may wish to introduce.
Among the more familiar native vines the Virginia Creeper, or American Ivy, stands first in this region. It is also, appropriately, called woodbine. It is easy to grow, climbs extensively, sometimes by roots, and as by its disc-bearing tendrils, blossoming in July and ripening its small blackish berries in October; the leaves turn to brilliant colors in the early autumn or late summer.

The climbing bittersweet is a vigorous grower, once established, and its clean foliage and bright berries a constant delight. Climbing honeysuckle, charming for the arbor, the arched gateway or a recessed seat, Virgin’s bowers, among wild electromites; moonseed, and others are worth while.

Cedar Waxwings I Have Known

The early elderberries are ripe! The later ones just in bloom. Then the Siberian honeysuckle, choke cherry; that means cedar waxwings for me till late summer.

You can hear them: "zz-zat, zz-zat." There they are in the elderberry over the bird bath, eating the coral-red berries. How beautiful they are! The queer markings of black from back of the eye to neck, which gives them such a wise look. The lovely golden yellow band at the edge of the tail, the strange and unaccountable wax-like secondary wing quills and the lovely tailored waist in soft brownish gray!

A Story of One Waxwing

A group of tamarack trees grew where a road was to be built, so the builder—as is not often the case—decided the ways, leaving a sort of boulevard between. At the widest part of his little park the neighbors on either side had worn a footpath. Over this, on a low-hanging branch, a cedar waxwing had built her nest.

The Lady, sitting on her perch, was bathing a piece of embroidery on the child's petticoat; the old worn piece, having been ripped off, had dropped to the floor and was being blown about by the wind. A queer little scratching sound caused the Lady to look down and there, close to her feet, Madame Waxwing was hurriedly gathering up the strip of white embroidery to add to her finished nest.

It was a beautiful nest, snug and compact, made of soft gray mosses and thin strips of bark and grasses; and it was built so low that the little three-year-old, when lifted up, could look into it. Then, when Madame Waxwing had been sitting nearly two weeks, a neighboring lad of about ten shot and killed her with a sling shot!

When remonstrated with by the shocked and grieved Lady, he said: "It was a cherry bird." Poor birds! There were no cherry trees within fifty miles of the place and, in any case, they would not have been ripe for some weeks. The waxwing's food at that time must have consisted entirely of musklopes and fish flies, of which, goodness knows, there were a plenty.

The nest was left in the tamarack tree and, all winter long, could be seen, with its piece of white embroidery floating about it in the wind.

Another Story of Waxwings

A mountain ash tree grew over the walk near a porch. This particular season it was loaded with berries and, although a number of people were frequently on the porch, the tree was full of cedar waxwings that ate and ate and ate until they were so gorged that they sometimes fell to the walk!

Can you imagine the laugh we had when the boys picked them up and, finding them checkful of berries, took them by the feet and shook them until some of the berries spilled out and, being able to breathe once more, the birds flew back into the tree and went to gorging again!

Cedar waxwings usually go farther north than this region to nest in some cedar swamp. This summer they must have nested quite near for I have seen them at the bird bath and often heard them in the high bush honeysuckle.

Poems

Flower Rain

It is not raining rain to me,
It's raining daffodils—
In every dimpled drop I see
Wild flowers on the hills.
The clouds of May end it all,
And overwhelm the town;
It is not raining rain to me,
It's raining roses down.

It is not raining rain to me,
But fields of clover bloom,
Where every bumblebee can Find a bed and room.
It is not raining rain to me,
It's raining daffodils.
In every dimpled drop I see
Wild flowers on the hills.

A health unto the happy!
Afigfor him who frets!
It is not raining rain to me,
It's raining violets.

Vision

Lord, give me vision that shall see
Beyond the profit of today
Into the years which are to be,
That I may take the larger way
Of labor and achievement;
Help me to fashion staunch and sure
A work my fellow men shall know
As wrought to serve—and to endure.
I seek not fortune, Lord, nor claim
To scorn the recompense I earn;
But help me, as I play the game,
To give the world its just return.
Thou madest the earth for all of us,
Teach me, through struggle, strain
And stress,
To win and do my share, for thus
Can profit lead to happiness.

Guard me from thoughts of little man
Which blind the soul to greater things:
Save me from smug content and then
From greed and selfishness it brings;
Aid me to join that splendid clan
Of business men who seek to trace
A calm, considered working plan
To make the world a better place.

Lord, let the faith of these be mine,
A creed creative, simple, true,
Let me but aid in their design,
Let me but share the work they do;
Teach me to hold this task above
All lesser thoughts within my ken.
That thus I may be worthy of
The name of business man; Amen!

—Berton Braley.

STAR SONG

The stars are coming, one by one,
Ruth Marian, Ruth Marian,
And they are gathering tonight
To circle 'round the moon
And pour a measure of their light
Into the still lagoon.

And we will not be waking long
To revel in the silver thrones,
Ruth Marian, Ruth Marian,
For sleep will not delay.
The sandman has his task begun,
And soon will on his way.

But long before his work is done,
Ruth Marian, Ruth Marian,
We'll steal into the shadows deep,
Upon the frosted grass,
And watch the silver whiteness leap
From stars, that soon will pass.

Wee spheres of light they seem to be,
Afloat upon a deep, blue sea,
Ruth Marian, Ruth Marian,
We see them from afar—
These tiny worlds by fairies spun.
How wonderful a star!

Butterflies and Moths

Interesting Collections Owned by Two Local Boys

One of the prettiest sights in a flower garden or in the forest these beautiful spring and summer days is the large number of butterflies, brilliantly colored and marked with many different patterns and shades. It may be surprising to learn that more than 200 kinds of butterflies and moths are to be found in this vicinity. What an interesting study these winged creatures must be for those who take a delight in collecting them.

Two local boys who have very fine collections of butterflies and moths are Clark Carnes, N. Oneida St., and Walter Ingelthorn, Jr., W. Prospect St.

In March Mr. Carnes has been collecting for the past two years and young Ingelthorn has been at it for a year and a half.

In addition to the common and well known method of catching butterflies and moths with a net especially devised for the purpose, these boys described another method which is especially interesting at this time when there is so much discussion about the Eighteenth amendment. It is to get the butterfly intoxicated or at least in a dazed condition that it is easily captured. This may be done by placing a liquid called "sagging," mixing sugar and some liquid containing alcohol, and then painting the mixture on a trunk of a tree. The butterfly, attracted by the sweet odor, comes to investigate, and soon after alighting on the "sagging" tree, will become stumped by the heavy alcoholic fumes.

After the butterflies and moths are caught they are put in a glass jar containing a very small quantity of gum water, a powdered substance protected by layers of plaster of Paris or gypsum in the bottom of the jar so that the deadly fumes or the stumps of the substance itself will not long prevail.

This powerful poison makes their work of the luckless butterflies, and their quick and humane death, and their nature or disfigure the bodies of the creatures, so that they can be mounted as perfect specimens.

Then comes the mounting. Carnes and Ingelthorn have mounted their specimens in cotton batting covered with glass, as is indicated in the illustration. The specimens must first be placed on a stretching board and left there several hours before the actual mounting takes place. The stretching board is a piece of wood with a groove in the middle into which is placed the body of the insect. The wings are then stretched out on strips of either side of this groove and after being held in this position for some length of time they will stay that way.

The most common varieties of butterflies in this vicinity the Monarch, Viceroy, Red Admiral, Morning Glory, and the Costume, are the most common and beautiful. They are all of them wondrously colored and marked with patterns in dyes and shades.

It is a great delight to see a Monarch in flight, his wings wide open, shimmering and gleaming with beautiful colors and patterns. The Viceroy has a graceful form, and the Red Admiral a more slender look. The Morning Glory is a beautiful and graceful creature, and the Costume is a wonderful and wondrously colored creature.

An interesting illustration of how Mother Nature protects a certain specimen of butterfly called the Viceroy from its natural enemies, the birds, may be related here. The Monarch butterfly is known to most everyone. It is a large specimen, orange in color, striped with black. An American Indian used to put a Monarch butterfly on the nose of a Samoan as a charm to keep away a cold. It is also said that a Monarch butterfly on the nose of a sick child will cure the child of colds.

The Viceroy, on the other hand, has a very sweet flavor, and would make a good pickling for the birds, but for the fact that it has been colored and marked the same as the Monarch, it would be very attractive to the birds as a meal of food because it has a very bitter taste. The Viceroy, on the other hand, has a sweet flavor, and would make a good pickling for the birds, but for the fact that it has been colored and marked the same as the Monarch, it would be very attractive to the birds as a meal of food because it has a very bitter taste.

Often the question has been asked, "What is the difference between a butterfly and a moth?" There is really little resemblance between the two insects except the shape of their bodies. Four major differences distinguish them, although in all these distinctions there are one or two exceptions to the general rule, as is the case with most of Mother Nature's rules and regulations.

In the first place the general rule may be applied that butterflies fly by day while moths are very largely night fliers, though as has been mentioned there are exceptions to the general rule. Butterflies usually can be seen in the early morning or late evening when a chrysalis while the worms and grubs from which moths are hatched, spin a dry cocoon about themselves.

The other three distinctions are differences of bodily structure. The antennae or "feelers" extending out from a butterfly's head are plain with a club shaped end. The antennae of a moth are feathered, resembling a beautiful fern-like construction. Butterflies, as a general rule have a slender or tapering abdomen, while the abdomen of a moth is large and fat. The final point of distinction is that butterfly wings usually are in a vertical position when the insect alights, while a moth's wings are spread horizontally. As has been said, moths are for the most part night fliers, but they will come out occasionally on very hot days. They will not get out in the rain, although thunder and lightning attract them. Some of the moths are very beautiful creatures; as a class they attain a much larger size than do the butterflies. Clark Carnes has one specimen, a Ceropina moth, which has a wingspread of eight inches.

Many people have harbored the old and rather peculiar idea that the large night moths are poisonous. This is far from being true. There is only one rather rare specimen of moth known to be at all poisonous. This is the Io moth which has spines on its back which secrete a poison which causes swelling and a certain amount of discomfort, but is by no means deadly.
