Travel Club Members Striving for Big Credits Before Drop Saturday Night at Nine O’Clock

Another Big Credit Drop On Saturday

Struggle for Supremacy Will Be Fought Out During the Next Two Weeks and Two Days.

GAME FIGHT IS AHEAD

All Active Club Members Realize Final Results Depend Upon What Is Done Now.

The second period of the Review Circulation Campaign will close Saturday, October 11, at 9 p.m. Tens of thousands of credits are being issued and every candidate has profited. A large number of credits have been polled since the beginning of the campaign. It is a strange coincidence—something unusual in affairs of this kind. Each of the leading club members have profited so equally during these first four weeks of the Travel Club that without hairline figuring, it would be impossible to determine the leaders today. This Review Campaign is different than most of its kind as it is not unusual to have some one with a big lead. Such is positively not the case in this campaign.

Leaders Close Together

With the leaders none too strongly entrenched in their respective positions, the competition now steps itself down to the most resourceful members and surprises may be looked for at any time.

The competition therefore, so far as the relative standing of candidates is concerned, is practically where it was last week. Hence the struggle for supremacy will be fought out during the next two weeks. It depends entirely upon the results between now and the finish as to who the ultimate winner will be. Everything is “hustle” from now on and changes in the standings are expected just as fast with only two weeks left before the close of the campaign.

Actual Test Ahead

And now for a whirlwind finish. Now for sensations and surprises. These are days that test the resourcefulness of candidates. Here is where their courage makes them fight or lack of it takes the stiffness out of their knees and leaves them trailing in the dust. Also...

Now Is the Time to Give Your Subscription to Your Favorite Contestant While Credits Are High

The management of the Review Travel Club is well pleased with the work of all contestants. There were many changes in the lineup for last week’s reports. However, this does not indicate the credit standing of any contestant. The list that we publish each week merely shows the position in which the various contestants stand as to the cash report for the previous week’s business. In some cases, a contestant may turn in a smaller amount of cash and still have a larger amount of credits than the contestant who is higher up in the list. We will not reveal the credit standing of any contestant until after the close of the campaign.

More genuine action has taken place during the last few days than at any time since the campaign began. Everyone of the workers is now more determined than ever before to be declared the winner of one of the fine automobiles or a thousand dollars in cash. Interest in the campaign is running high. This is no idle boast. An unusual feature of this contest is very noticeable, personal pride being taken by all of the contestants, feeling that they owe it to their friends who have helped them so loyally to show their appreciation.

PETER FASSENDER

Peter Fassender, 254 N. State street, rises to dispute Grandpa Langstedt’s claim to being the “youngest old man in town” and he certainly presents strong arguments for his side of the case.

He was born December 23, 1838, in Bonn, a small town located eleven miles from Cologne in the Rhine Province, Germany, which makes his age nearly 92. In 1856 his parents emigrated to America and settled on a farm near Milwaukee where young Peter grew to manhood. In 1862 he married Elizabeth Nettelkoven and the young couple went to housekeeping on a rented farm in Town Granville near Milwaukee. Incidentally remarked, Mrs. Fassender is only one year younger than her husband and is just as spry and healthy as he; certainly an unusual couple.

After living as tenants for a year they decided to strike out for themselves, loaded their few worldly goods onto an oxcart and trekked to Appleton where they arrived October 31, 1863, after a five day trip.

Fassender soon found work with farmers around here, but that did not satisfy him and he bought 60 acres in Town Ellington. It was all woods except a tiny patch on which stood a small log house. The primeval forest in which he found himself did not daunt him and he soon had a beautiful farm which he enlarged by buying neighboring land until he owned one of the best farms in that part of the county. In 1901 he decided to take life easy, sold the farm to his second son, Joe, and moved to Appleton where he has since lived.

The Fassenders have six children living: Joe on the old homestead; John on a farm near Black Creek; Hubert, operating a creamery in Kaukauna; Henry operating a creamery in Holmen-town; Mrs. P. Tatrow and Miss Ann Fassender in Appleton.

In spite of his ninety-two years, old Peter does practically all the work around the house and yard. When asked whether he put on and took off the storm windows, he asked in evident surprise: “Why not?” Last summer he noticed that the paint was peeling under the eaves of the house, so he got a ladder, mounted it and scraped off the peeling paint before applying a new coat. Where is there another man of his years who could climb a twenty-five foot ladder, to say nothing of doing a scraping and painting job at that height? He retains all his faculties, but two years ago suddenly discovered that he had lost the sight of his right eye entirely, though the left is as good as ever. He had never noticed that anything was wrong with his eyesight, until one day while planting a board, he closed his left eye to sight along the planed edge and found himself in darkness. How long he had been blind in that eye he does not know. That, however, does not keep him from his daily schedule of errands at the service building on the fair grounds, where he meets a number of his old cronies and shows them how to play that grand old game.

He takes his accomplishments in the matters of storm window painting, and similar jobs as a matter of course, but he is emphatic in his statement that for many years past his very best work has been performed three days a time when he pulls his chair up to the dining table and gets busy at the good things which his wife and daughter set before him. That is when he claims to be really in his element and an occupation at which he will take second place for nobody.

PEOPLE NOT GUILTY TO ROBBERY OF NICHOLS BANK

W. J. Davis, who was arrested at Iron Mountain, Mich., a couple of weeks ago on the charge of having robbed the State Bank of Nichols, pleaded not guilty when arraigned in local court Wednesday. As he had previously filed an affidavit of indigence the court appointed John Morgan to defend him. The trial was set for November 1 and bail placed at $5,000 which Davis was unable to furnish.

He was arrested by officials in Iron Mountain after his bragging of the ease with which he obtained his money had aroused suspicions and led to his being shadowed. A loaded revolver was found under his pillow when he was taken into custody.

Matt Schmidt & Son
Hunting in Pioneer Days

With the hunting season on, the vet- erans are apt to reminisce as they gather up their guns and go out to the fields, or call the dog to heel for a transport of the hills. Some of them recently pictured for us the great flocks of wild pigeons that "made the sky black" over the fields and "down on the highway." Another talked of bear hunts many moons ago, by the light of the full moon.

It was also so fascinating to one who had tramped the game trails for many years that it went upon our mind to make a trip down among the old records and antique diaries for material to paint for you the hunters' paradise this region once was.

Can any present-day hunter, who has shot the few hours once in several years, visualize a pigeon roost (in the town of Bavina) seven miles long by two or three miles wide, with millions of pigeons roosting at the end of November, setting the vectors of thousands of doves to break them down? Small wonder that literally thousands were killed for sport and for the bolling pot. It is recorded that George Grignon, while shooting pigeons near Grand Malin (Kaukauna) accidentally shot his right arm near the wrist through the center, "so that it had to be amputated."

Years many wild pigeons were shot by the hundred thousands in this locality, when "the air was black with them."

One autumn—seventy-five years ago—the woods in this vicinity were "fairly alive with black squirrels" and doves were having rare sport hunting them. Racooners were also more abundant that year and more "mischief" than at "any time in the memory of the white man." There were frequent night hunts and one Saturday a party of about thirty citizens organized a buckhounds hunt and brought out a "bag" of "about a thousand black and gray squirrels, pigeons, quails, partridges, ducks, etc." In the evening over a passant supper at the Crescent Hotel they talked of other hunts.

About the same time there seems to have been considerable bear hunting and we read of "a generous bear skin," for Sunday dinners and note accounts of the big black bears killed in the county, especially in the "schooled" north of the city.

They proved so troublesome, invading cornfields, killing hogs and "scaring" juveniles of the night. A call was issued for a general bear hunt which seems to have been regarded as quite a lark. When it was reported that nine men in one day killed thirteen bears in Wapaca County, Appleton hunters requested to invade the woods and root the trouble makers, and two men killed eight bears in one day near Wolf river in Outagamie County, the abundance of hounds probably bringing so many to that locality.

Deer were plentiful, too, and during the stay of a light snowfall that November several townsmen were successful in killing deer within a mile or two of town. But a few years later,

Mr. Meating first took his rural pupils to the capital at Madison for graduation exercises. Last June he took about 1,500 to Washington, D. C., aboard two special trains, for graduation exercises at the national capital, and for two days of sight-seeing. The cost was kept at $25 per person, and this accomplishment led to arrangements for an European trip within the reach of the average teacher’s purse, and for less than half the usual cost.

Izaak Walton League

State Convention at Oshkosh Next Week

A number of local sportmen, members of the Izaak Walton League of America, are planning to attend the annual state convention to be held at Hotel Atneren next Thursday and Friday, October 16 and 17. An interesting program covering discussions of stream pollution, the trespass law, the day of rest for ducks, the fishing license and other subjects of importance to sportmen has been arranged and the speakers will be men nationally known. It is hoped that Phillip La Follette will also be present.

The high point of the convention will be the banquet to be held at the Athenaeum Thursday evening, at which an especially large delegation from Appleton is looked for. Local sportmen and everybody interested in conservation are requested to make their reservations early. Tickets may be obtained of E. W. Shannon, J. E. Mur- phy, Joe Schultz or B. A. Sykes.

Rural Teachers to Tour Europe Next Year

Superintendent Meeting Already Making Arrangements

After two successful ventures in which rural school pupils were given the opportunity to travel to places of interest at low cost, A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, is preparing a new tour which will enable more than 500 rural school teachers to see some of the principal countries of Europe at a cost of less than $425 each.

Details are now in the process of consummation for a 33-day trip to Europe in July, 1931, via rail to either Montreal, New York, and thence to England and France. Four full days will be spent in London and the Shakespearian country, and five days in Paris. Side trips will be arranged for those who wish to travel to Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, and Holland.

Without any public announcement, Mr. Meating has had 150 applications and expects more than 500 teachers to participate. Under a well-outlined railroad and steamer transpor- tation, motor buses, hotel accommoda- tions, meals, tips and all other expenses will be included in the pro- posal of a tour costing less than $425.

OUR WATER RATES

Appleton has long known that it is fortunate in the personnel of its water commission under whose efficient management our municipal water works plant has come to be recognized as one of the best in the state. And not only that, but the local water users are assured of lower rates after next January because the commission petitioned and obtained from the state rate commission permission to reduce the rates, even though they compared favorably with the rates paid in other cities.

As a further proof of the efficiency of the local body can be cited the fact that three other cities in the state now have petitions pending before the state rate commission for permission to increase the rates. In Sheboygan a hearing was held Wednesday, Kenosha will have a chance to present its case on October seventeenth, and on October twenty-fourth Oconto Falls will be heard. Here are three cities in the state, two of them considerably larger than Appleton, asking permission to increase rates just when the local commission is putting into effect very material reductions for the benefit of water users.

Appleton is indeed to be congratulated on its water commission!

THE MUNICIPAL GOLF COURSE

That the municipal golf course is filling a real demand is shown by the attendance and the profits realized. Although only opened to the public late last fall, it will have accumulated a profit of ten thousand dollars by the close of the present season. It is one of those rare things, a municipal activity which not only pays for itself, but actually shows a large profit.

Players have been urgent in their demands that the course be enlarged to eighteen holes, a request which has been denied by the park board. While we endorse the attitude of the board most emphatically in opposing unnecessary expenditures, we believe that this is a case which calls for an exception.

The profits accruing from the course are very properly being kept in a separate fund, designed to be used for the enlargement and improvement of the course; for the benefit of the people who make the profits possible. Because of the fact that the nine hole course is badly crowded, its enlargement would add greatly to the enjoyment of the players and we believe this could be done in the same manner as any going business concern would finance a similar undertaking. The ten thousand and could be used as the down payment and the balance put in short term notes to be paid out of the profits.

The total cost of the enlargement would be in the neighborhood of thirty-five thousand dollars. A ten thousand dollar down payment would leave a balance of twenty-five thousand dollars which would be paid off by the profits within four years. And these profits are more likely to increase than to be lessened. Surely that would seem to be an attractive business proposition no matter from which angle it is viewed.

A SCIENTIFIC MARVEL

Saturday the giant British airship R-101 was wrecked in France and on Monday American newspapers, thousands of miles away from the scene of the catastrophe, were able to publish pictures of the gnssembled wreckage. These pictures were made available by the radio. The air, which is a few hours before had refused to restrain the weight of the dirigible, was put to work to carry the picture of its havoc to the other ends of the world. Thus science, enthroned in accomplishment by some awful error in calculation, proves its mastery in the very hour of defeat. While the wreckage was still in flames, sparks marshalled by man sputtered forth the picture of devastation from high radio towers and printer's ink made indelible the high moment of disaster.

Man failed in one attempt to conquer the elements, but he was successful in another effort even more remarkable.

KEEP IT GOING!

Sometimes it seems as if we have to be "licked out of" one state of mind and into another. And maybe most of us need the "lickin'" McGraw-Hill gives us in The Business Week:

"After a last frantic attempt this week to sell the world back to the cave-men on the basis of a sheriff's auction, the bears in the commodity and security markets were routed by the revulsion to common-sense on the part of the business community. . . . There has been a somewhat sheepish realization that though the high and justifiable hope of vigorous business recovery this fall seems to have gone glimmering, it does not follow that the world is going back to bows and arrows, buggies, cave-bungalows and bear-skinning. . . .

Though still disappointing in its speed, gradual improvement in the general level of business activity continues, at slightly more than the seasonal rate. . . . The seasonal rise in industrial activity is still irregular and uncertain, but in general trade and in building it is more definite. Further improvement during October is fairly certain, but, without a sudden and decisive change in business psychology and banking policy, it is difficult to see from what source to expect trade to gather sufficient momentum in the next six weeks to carry us through the winter onto higher and firmer ground next year. . . . The economic aborigines and puritan fathers who like long winters will enjoy this one."

Now that the business thermometer is going up let's give it a boost! Everybody! If you can possibly pay that account, do it! If you can't pay all of it, pay what you can. If you have a job for somebody, give it to him. If you haven't one, see if you can't make one. Even if it is only some little thing around the house, around the yard. This is a fine time for doing a lot of things that are being put off till spring for no good reason on earth.

COUNTY CONTROLLED ROADHOUSES

An experiment is to be launched in Milwaukee county next week which may lead to the establishment of county controlled and supervised roadhouses in all county parks if present plans of the park commission meet with success.

The new $52,000 clubhouse at Brown Deer is to be opened as a roadhouse under this plan of county control on October 15. A staffed dining room, a dance floor, and a completely equipped kitchen are to be maintained, with a caterer for special occasions.

Running the roadhouse under county supervision is the first official step against the much criticized highway inn, where patrons "sometimes conduct themselves without restraint," and is designed to eliminate the objectionable features of commercial roadhouses.

Groups may charter the clubhouse for parties and the commission's plan is "to bring young people into a clean, wholesome atmosphere to provide roadhouse youth people seek but at the same time restrict it so that there is no damage whatsoever to patrons."

If the Brown Deer plan succeeds it will probably be extended to all county parks next season. Another part of the plan is for the construction of inland lakes to provide swimming and boating in summer and skating in winter. Water in the lakes will be kept fresh and clean by a pumping system and modern bathhouses will be erected. Small camps with shelters where families may gather for a day's outing, or an evening picnic, will be established along Root, Milwaukee and Pomonk rivers.

Appleton and Outagamie county have arrived at the point where there is a need and a demand for parked recreation grounds that provide "recreation for the whole family." Several communications to Review on this subject were published some weeks ago. This is a good time to think this thing out. Let us have your plans and ideas. They may help to bring about definite action.

The combination of courage and intelligence is unbeatable.

It is expected that forty-two vocational schools will be represented.

The Wisconsin Seminar of scout executives will convene at the Conway Hotel October 15. It is expected that scout executives from Milwaukee, Racine, Madison, Oshkosh, Green Bay, Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Fond du Lac, Chippewa Falls, Kenosha and other communities will attend. Arthur Grish of Kenosha is chairman of the program committee.

Work on the new Irving Zuehlke building is progressing rapidly and it is expected that the exterior, including the roof, will be completed by November 20. Tenants of the lower stories will move in before the upper stories have been finished.

Albert Greenberg, proprietor of the Little Club on Highway 41, just outside the city limits, was fined $250 and had his dance hall license revoked by a Winnebago court because he conducted dances without having a county dance supervisor present.

Republican candidates for office held a meeting Tuesday at which A. H. Krueger, chairman of the county committee, presided. Plans were laid for an energetic campaign from now until election and resolutions were adopted pledging support to the entire Republican ticket.

The first meeting of the night course in advertising, arranged by the Vocational school for manufacturers, will be held next Monday evening.

The brake testing campaign was ordered stopped by Mayor Goodland because the tickets issued to cars tested carried the advertisements of two local concerns which the mayor regarded as unfair to other automobile dealers. The campaign will be continued later when blank cards will be issued.

The park board has decided not to purchase any additional land for the municipal golf course at present, because it was not considered advisable to incur any but absolutely necessary indebtedness under existing business conditions.

STATE AND NATION

Secretary of State Stimson, addressing international good roads congress, emphasized the intimate relation between good roads, communication and national prosperity and the fact that good highways make for peace.

In the fourth of a series of national broadcast addresses arranged by the Republican national committee, Speaker Longworth Monday evening blamed the Democrats for the slow recovery from economic depression.

Drop in the state assessment this year which has been announced by the tax commission as $79,520,757 less than that of last year coupled with a certain slack in income tax receipts is held to mean a decided jump in state taxes to be levied within a few weeks. The slump in state taxable property and income taxes are both due to the general depression. The drop in property values means that the university, the teachers' colleges and the common schools will get less money through normal channels and is certain to lead to bitter appropriation fights at the next legislative session.

Each one of the educational branches is allotted a definite mill tax on property in figuring their regular appropriations. The university and teachers' colleges then get this amount out of the income tax and what is left goes to the common schools. This year with both property valuation and income taxes for the common schools and a large portion of this latter expense must come with a property tax levy.

Last year's total state tax was $4,296,778.51. One official estimated that the state tax this year would be at least $2,000,000 more than this figure.

Are Your Brakes Right?
If your brakes aren’t right you had better not take the car out. If you don’t know whether they are or not, there is only one thing to do: Drive your car onto our Jumbo Giant Brake tester and find out. The test takes only two minutes. It should be made every thousand or fifteen hundred miles. Here is the service the careful motorist has been waiting for. There is a gauge for each wheel that tells you accurately just what each brake is going to do in an emergency.

By having any needed adjustment and equalizing done right on the “Jumbo” you drive away knowing that your brakes are in perfect condition and there is no more satisfying feeling in the world.

Football has been started this year for the first time. Only three of the boys have played previous to this year. Many of the fellows have been loyal to the school by getting out to practice every evening. At the present time the linemen who hold down the regular positions are: Paul Albers, center; "Babe" Le May and Versteeg, guards; Schwanske and Mante, tackles; Hoffsink and Vanden Velden, ends; with Paul Jensen pushing them hard. In the backfield there are Van Offen, Van Sestern, Weyenberg, Williams, Kilen, and Captain ‘Buck’ LeMay all working hard for their positions. Workouts this week have been drills on the forward mass defense and end runs. This is to get the boys ready for the game with Menasha Friday evening.

How Can I?

Q. How can I drive a nail into wood without marinating the wall?
A. A nail can be driven into a plaster wall without marinating the plaster if the nail is put in hot for a few minutes, or dipped into melted paraffin.

Q. How can I prevent drafts?
A. Dissolve one ounce of flour of vitriol in one quart of soft water. Do not use it until it is thoroughly mixed and settled. Apply it at night.

Q. How can I successfully launder linens?
A. Before washing ties, soak them in a solution of one teaspoonful of ammonia to one quart of water. Then press on the wrong side.

Q. How can I make a good toilet perfume?
A. A good toilet perfume can be made by mixing two ounces of alcohol with one-half ounce of oil. Keep it in a bottle, tightly corked, and shake well before using.

Q. How can I bleach a scored plate?
A. Rub the spot immediately with a thumb dipped in diluted peroxide. Then on the iron and plate it will be as white as originally. Do not use this on colored material.

Q. How can I test eggs for freshness?
A. Place the egg in a pan of water. If fresh, it will lie on its side. If old, it will stand on end. If very old, it will float.

Q. How can I preserve a new calico?
A. A new calico should be rinsed for about thirty minutes before using. This prevents stretching. It will dry as readily and will last longer.

Q. How can I mend kid gloves?
A. Buttonhole around the edge of the tear before drawing together. Then over-sow the buttonhole together and the repair is substantial.

Q. How can I separate a water glass when it becomes stuck in another?
A. Pour cold water in the upper one to contract it, and then immerse the lower one in warm water to expand it. They can then be easily separated.

Q. How can the skins from beets be removed very readily?
A. Place the beets in hot water for a short time, drain off the hot water and immediately fill the vessel with cold water.

Q. How can the shiny parts of a garment be removed?
A. Sponge it with a solution of one teaspoonful of ammonia to one quart of water. Then press on the wrong side.

Q. How can I make a cement for pipe joints?
A. Mix ten pounds of yellow ocher, four pounds of ground litharge, four pounds of whiting, one-half pound of hemp, cut up fine. Mix together with linseed to answer the consistency of putty.

Q. How can I remove a rusty screw?
A. Heat a poker or spike red hot and apply it to the head of a screw that is rusty and oblate. When the screw has become hot it can be removed very easily.

Q. How can I take away all dampness of rooms?
A. Place blocks of camphor under the corners and on the shelves, replacing them as they evaporate.

Q. How can I remove a straw hat?
A. If it is desired to change the shape of a hat, pour boiling water over it, and while it is hot and pliable, reshape it with the hands. Take a bowl or vessel that will fit the crown and place the hat on this while working, also leaving it on the bowl to dry in the sun.

Q. How can I tighten the handle of an umbrella?
A. If the umbrella handle becomes loose, fill the hole in the handle with powdered resin, heat the rod, and then press firmly into the hole.

Q. How can I prevent the peeling of onions from affecting the tear ducts of the eyes?
A. By dipping the onions for a moment in boiling water and then beginning at the root and peeling upwards.

In Memory of
GERTRUDE KOHLER

It is autumn, Marcella, the leaves begin to fall.
The flowers soon will cease their bloom;
The old cherry tree outside the window soon will fall.
Dark and drear in the fullness of the moon.

It is winter, Oscar, the leaves lie dead beneath the snow;
The flowers rest in their tomb;
The old cherry tree outside the window shines
Ghostly white in the fullness of the moon.

It is springtime, George, the leaves are half-formed;
The baby flowers are in bloom;
The old cherry tree outside the window soon will shine
All verdant in the fullness of the moon.

Deep down below, my dear, Nature is astir,
And as she surges upward
To a glorious riot of color and song,
So do these we loved return to us again.

They live, Marcella, within the soft heart of the rose,
The shy, wild violet in the grass,
The iris beneath the window's ledge,
The showy, delicate clusters of the hydrangea's mass.

If you listen closely, George, you will hear
Her whispers in the gentle, warm winds as it draws nigh,
In the twilight, all red and gold
That settles down over the house-top's hold.

She is there Marcella, she is there,
Hovering protectively about
The familiar scenes she loved,
The baby boy she so adored.
If, because of the tears we have shed for her,
If, because of the memories we keep of her,
If she finds us better men and women,
Surely, surely then, she is comforted.
—Clara Miller.

TEN WAYS TO DIE YOUNG!
1. Burn your candle at both ends—especially when tired.
2. Worry from morning till night, and learn to enjoy it.
3. Drink no water—only "fire-water."
4. Never consult a doctor or a dentist, especially for a regular examination.
5. Stay around sick people as much as possible.
6. Avoid fresh air. Stay in close, overheated rooms.
7. Keep your indigestion upset. Stuff yourself, eating pounds of meats and sweets daily, but no fruit.
8. Never have any health habits—particularly regular ones.
10. If you get out of breath easily, sleep poorly, feel run down or experience pain, just continue to cling to these rules. Try earnestly and you'll soon die from some preventable disease—most likely tuberculosis.

Then she silently slipped away from me, and I was gazing blankly at the old door. "Next June," I heard a voice echo; and there, looking at me with a smile, as Louisa had done. "Hate was far from my heart, and when I saw the man himself was regarding me with no particular friendship, I was disposed to put aside for the moment all feelings of esteem. The generosity of the victor glowed within me. As he advanced to me his manner was almost deprecating. "You must forgive me," he said, not without dignity, "for overbearing you; but by choice I was the lower man, and dropped upon you before I realized it." He extended his hand frankly. "I trust my countrymen will see your good will not be entirely obnoxious. I know that my conduct in this affair cannot have been viewed by you in a very favorable light; but I am a badly beaten man, Can't you be generous and forgive my bygones be bygones? Won't you?"

I had not yet come down to earth. I was standing there with the gilded heights of love, and inclined to a general amnesty towards my enemies. As he stood there, quiet and contemplative, there was an aura of frankness and honesty about this man that it was hard to withstand. For the moment I was overcome with sincerity, and weakly I surrendered my hand. His grip made me wince.

"You are excusing me? You know you admire her. They don't make them any better. She's pure gold. You know I was not overjoyed when the horse died, and the news came that you were going to be married. Now the thing is to see how it takes, and to see if that little horse will take you. I am going to get work on the creeks."

"I'll tell you what: I've got I'm. I'm going to get work on the creeks."

"Hey, you don't know what a man is in this country!"

"Not quite yet, sir," I said. "I believe you can solve a man's wrongs on the spot."

"You think you can do that?"

"I think I can."

"Oh, that's all right," he said. "I'm sorry I played such a mean part in the past, and I'll do anything in my power to straighten things out. Believe me, I mean it. Your English friend, gave me the worst beating of my life, but three days after I went round and shook hands with him. Fine fellow that. We're good friends now. I always own up when I'm beaten, and I never bear ill will. If you can help you in any way, and hasten your marriage (the last thing I want to think of), I'll help you.

"Yes, but just on Jack Locaste: that's all."

I must say the man could be most courteous. He told me a great deal about his friend, talked to me, my fears were dissipated, my suspicions lulled. And when we parted, I said, "Don't forget," he said; "if you want help hand on me. I mean it now, I mean it."

"Twas early in the bright and cool of the morning when we started for Edelmo, Jim and I. I had a letter from Locaste to Ribwood and Hoofman, the laymon, and I showed it to Jim. He frowned.

"What does he mean to say you've pulled up with that devil?"

"Oh, he's not so bad," I expostulated. "I was quite impressed. He even offered me his hand in friendship. I've no reason to doubt his sincerity."

"He's about as sincere as a tame rattlesnake. Put his letter in the creek."

I refused to listen to the old man.

"Well, go your own gait," he said; "I don't say that I didn't warn you.

Following the trail, we struck up a small muddy stream in a narrow canyon of rocks. We were encumbered with our arms, and had to push our way into the creek bed and came to the Forks. It was a little town, Dawson City, not much of a town with all its sordid aspects innately accented. There in the din and dust and dirt I was a little more at home; for there, after eating heartily, we struck up Éldorado. At the Forks I inquired regarding Ribwood and Hoof. "Don't you join? For them, are you? Well, they've got a blamed hard name. If you're going to do a job elsewhere, don't turn it down,"

Ribwood was a tall, giant Copper-ish man, with a large beard, and a glossy air; Hoof, a burly, beet-colored Australian with a bulging stomach."

"Yes, we'll put you to work," said Hoofman, reading the letter. "Get ready and we'll turn you on the job."

So, right away, I found myself in the dumpy-pile, jamming a shovel into the mud, and swinging it into the sluice-box five feet higher than my head. Keeping at this hour after hour was no fun. For three days I made the dirt fly, but to quitting time, I must say, I was beginning to wonder if the town was one. Again I suffered all the torments of coming toil-broken. The constant hoisting and throwing of the box some how worked muscles that were gone into action before, and I ached elsewhere.

I was glad, indeed, when, on the evening of the third day, Ribwood came to me and said, "I guess you better work up at the shaft tomorrow. We want a man tough and

They had broken a shaft sunk on the hillside. They were down some forty feet and were digging in, wheeling the pay soil, and full of the hope that they would find the treasure. The ropes were turned, and was on the way of becoming a miner.

Turning the windlass over the shaft was a little, tough middle-rat, who ex celled in the sublime sens of action. Pat Dougans was his name, and I will call him the "Worm."

He was the most degraded type of man I ever met, but he was honest, and a little bit of a drunkard, but he told me he was just on Jack Locaste: that's all."

I must say the man could be most courteous. He told me a great deal about his friend, talked to me, my fears were dissipated, my suspicions lulled. And when we parted, I said, "Don't forget," he said; "if you want help hand on me. I mean it now, I mean it."

Next day found us all three surveying our claim. The first thing to do was to build a cabin. Right away we started rigging it, and we worked long and hard. The work was pleasant, and conducted in such friendship that the time passed merrily. The man who wrote the letter was about Borna. I schooled myself into the belief that she was all right, and that the idea of a quarter that was bringing her nearer to me.

We had hauled the logs for the cabin, and the foundation was laid. Every night the place is deserted and I am myself proposed we should get you to keep a watch.

"Yes, I said; "I'll run you every evening if the others don't object."

"Yes, sir," I answered. "I'll save your cleanup, and get some of those leads. Besides, I know who he is."

"You don't say. Well, I'm darned
It was about four in the afternoon when we reached the crook. Up it went, our leader, spurred on, to the place where a rude shack had been dug. We would stop there and eat our sandwiches and read and talk and look at our watch.

"Here it is, boys," he said. "Here's my discovery stake. Now you fellows can dig in for your share of the profits. You don't have to give me a cent of anything. There's enough here to go around."

"Yes, but we have to help you," we said.

"But that's all right, boys. There's enough here for all of us. You can have as much as you want."

"But how do we get the money for this stake?"

"You don't have to worry about that. I'll take care of it."

We started back to the shack, where we had left our lunch. We were hungry and started to eat.

Tale of a Tame Blackbird
Did you ever have a tame blackbird? I want you to know they make the dearest pets and I’ll tell you about one I knew.

The little fellow had fallen from the nest in a pine tree in the lumber yard before he was able to fly or find his food. The Pater picked him up and brought him home. Of course, we were delighted and immediately set out to catch flies and insects for him—he had such a big appetite!

Then the Pater built a commodious cage for him, where he slept contentedly at night and dined on cloudy days. He seemed happy and quite all right and ate bread and tiny bits of meat and he was such fun! If we’d say: “What is your name, Joqueej?” he’d puff every feather, spread out his tail and wings, bow his head and roll his yellow eyes and say, “Jo-cee-ajo-queej.” When we screamed with glee, he’d repeat it for us and act as though he, too, were laughing.

Sunday mornings he had his bath, an event for the whole family. He’d splish until every bit of water was out of his dish and then fly to a set of antlers to shake and dry himself.

In the daytime he usually had an upstairs workshop room to himself and many a funny caper he cut up there. Nothing afforded him greater pleasure than to carry a quantity of seed beans to the edge of the workbench and drop them one to the floor and watch them bounce about. Once he made a tremendous racket and we found he had worried a large wooden maul off the bench to the floor. We couldn’t imagine how he could perform such feats, so replaced it and watching through the crack of the door saw him work his strong beak under it, then opening it, the maul would move a trifle. He puffed up his feathers until the thing tumbled to the floor with a terrific noise. Then to see the satisfied air with which he’d shake himself and stalk away to look for more mischief was amusingly funny.

Once we felt he surely had committed suicide when we found that he had managed, with that strong beak of his, to open a cigar box which contained our colored crayons and had eaten red, orange, yellow, green, and blue. Our hearts nearly broke in that day, but it never fooled him, and when we came home he was fine as a fiddle.

One thing delighted him—to stand on the edge of the sewing machine while it was running. Here, too, he’d take things—pins, needles, bobbins—to the edge, drop them, watch them land and hop back for more.

Then the days began to lengthen and the Pater suggested that he might join his kind, if he were liberated—go on that long, long trail for the winter …

I think we might not have been so willing to take out his cage and open the door had we not believed that he loved us too dearly to leave us.

He flew to the roof of the barn and stood looking, not at us, but far, far away. We thought to find him in his cage at nothing—but he had gone. We felt in springtime a love to return to us—we loved him so—but he never did. He may not have survived the long journey to the southland, but we had done what we felt was best for our little pet.

Lotus in the Fox Valley

As an experiment that should prove most interesting to the flower lover who has turned to water gardening—and what enthusiastic gardener has not—is being tried by F. H. Degraff, nature lover and sportsman of Fond du Lac.

Mr. Degraff has planted some lotus seeds in Lakeside park and believes the plantings will prove successful because conditions are similar to those of Winnebago bottoms. It has taken several years’ effort to obtain the seeds. Under natural conditions these float on the water and become water soaked and sink to the bottom. To make sure they would land in the right places Mr. Degraff employed the method of often used by growers of aquatic foods for muskrat farms and other purposes. That is, he placed the seeds in balls of clay and dropped into the water over the proper places in the bed of the lagoon with a water depth of three to four feet.

The lotus flower is one of nature’s prettiest. It grows to the size of a dinner plate and is held on a stiff stem above the water. The leaves are much like those of the white water lily, but larger.

There is the American lotus, or Water Trillium, originating in the western and southern states and bearing magnificent yellow flowers. Then there is the Egyptian lotus and the Chinese red lotus which florists claim can be easily grown. They should intrigue the ambitious water gardener.

Kitchen Helps

Have Stain Kit Ready

Garments may often be saved by quick action with the correct solution, so it is wise and convenient to have a stain kit ready at hand for emergencies. Such a home-made kit is an economy for the well-dressed woman, since successful stain removal often depends on immediate action, and for this the necessary materials must be ready at a moment’s notice. This kit may be either a small sturdy box with a hinged cover, or a small drawer.

Stain removal equipment should include:

- A container from which a stained portion of clothing may be thoroughly scrubbed, rubbed by hands or small pinch clothespins to hold it in place, and a medicine dropper or small glass rod to apply the stain remover.
- Common stains like grease spots are removed by laying the garment on an absorbent pad and rubbing with carbon tetrachloride, so the kit should contain pads made of old towels, cheesecloth or any other absorbent fabric.

As stated, a bottle of carbon tetrachloride is for removing grease; Fuller’s earth is a handy absorbent; a bottle of bleach such as Javelle water; and bottles of potassium permanganate and sodium chlorofluoride; glycerine, and acetic acid. Soap flakes, pure soap, iron rust soap, and soapstone back should be included. Every kit should contain a leaflet of directions for removing stains to which the housewife should refer whenever she needs information on stains. Miss Mrs. Thirsk suggests the bulletin called “Stain Remover,” soon to be published by the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, which any housewife may have for the asking.

- Foods with strong odors should always be kept covered in the refrigerator.

- Save soap scraps, put them through a food chopper and use for soap chips.

To loosen peach skins for easy peeling, dip peaches first in boiling and then in cold water.

- Good springs and a good mattress are sound investments, since they aid sound sleep which, in turn, aids health.

The quicker the journey of the vegetable from the garden to the canoe, the less danger there is of spoilage.

A medicinal dropper is convenient for removing stains from cloth. Stretch the stained portion over a bowl and apply the stain remover with the dropper.

- Green leafy vegetables wilt when mixed with salad dressing so, in making salad, they should not be dressed until just before serving. Other parts of the vegetable are improved in flavor if allowed to stand in French dressing a few hours.

Short Trips of Interest

Autumn Leaves and the Oneida

Who does not enjoy getting out into the open these wonderful fall days when the leaves are turning and the woods present a riot of color? But to really enjoy such a trip now it is necessary to leave the main travelled highways and stick to the side roads where you can loaf along as your fancy dictates and stop to enjoy some particularly charming view without blocking the traffic.

Such a trip is the following one through the Oneida Reservation; one which will cover only about sixty miles and afford you some of the prettiest scenery in this part of the state.

Drive to Seymour first. Of course you can take the pavement which is familiar to all, but a more interesting road and one on which you will meet much less traffic is the following: Start out on 41 towards Kaukauna and at the city limits turn north, past the old railroad farm and through Village Creek to South Osborn, formerly called Five Corners. At Five Corners take the road running to the northeast and follow it east and north until you hit 54 about one-half mile west of the church. Follow 54 past Seymour to Oneida village. As you enter the village take the first road angling off to the left across the railroad tracks. This road has been graded and gravelled and is in good condition, though it will not tempt to fast driving. It runs along the ridge on the north side of the Duck Creek valley and affords constant views of far away hills and valleys which for some reason seem to be much more colorful this season than other places in the state.

As you approach the last village keep straight ahead on county trunk ‘E’, past the old stone mission, built in 1821. Follow ‘E’ through Van’s Valley, the villages of Freedom.

"GAS AGE" HAVEN'T HIT
BICYCLES HAVEN'T DOUBLED

You can "believe it or not," but more bicycles are being made and used in the United States than ever before.

According to figures just made public by the Bureau of the Census, 367,845 bicycles were manufactured in 1929 against 186,820 in 1909—a year when the automobile was still comparatively new.

The average wholesale price was $20 each.

In 1909 it was $14.50.

And while the production of bicycles has been steadily on the increase, the number of motor cycles has been on the decline. Manufacturer of "gas bikes" dropped 9.3 per cent between 1927 and 1929.

Ball Out of Bounds

If a ball lies out of bounds the nearer player shall play his next stroke as nearly as possible from the place where the ball is found, and the distance between the place where the ball is found and the tee which is nearest to the hole, but not more than twenty yards, is to be measured and allowed for by the nearer player, or his partner, as the case may be.

GO WEST YOUNG MAN

Hornee Greeley’s advice might be changed today to “Go northwest, young man”—northwest to Alaska, the land in which resources and opportunities promise a great future development.

‘Tis still a four-from-another-rung man says Ray Lyman Wilbur, secretary of the interior. Stretching over hundreds of miles and including a vast expanse of territory, some 758,000,000 acres, it is an empire in itself.

It lies half way on the air route from New York to Tokyo. Its three great mountain ranges give it mineral wealth and water power. Its plains are comparably in value and size to the corn belt of our central states.

Great coal veins are exposed on its hillsides, some to a total thickness of 200 feet or more, and there are great hidden stores of gold, copper, and tin. Its forests are perhaps its greatest resource, with spruce, hemlock, birch, and cottonwood in billions of feet.

The rainfall varies from 15 to 200 inches, so that there are almost unlimited possibilities in the development of water power. With 20,000 miles of seacoast, the annual harvest of fish alone is enormous (250,000,000), and America’s fisheries offer unlimited mountain scenery.

There is the widest variation in its climate from the areas with heavy fog and thick vegetation to dry plateaus like those of North Dakota. The temperature drops from 50 below on the tops of the mountains to 80 above in some of the valleys.

The animal life is unique. Fox, seal, and reindeer offer the greatest opportunities.

Most Alaskans are like all pioneers, full of visions and dreams of the future. As a people we know but little of it. We have yet to appreciate its many values.

Mount McKinley in all its grandeur is unequaled elsewhere in America, and the combinations of stream and forest and of wooded hills and quiet seashore can be found everywhere.

Alaska stretches far out into the center of the north Pacific. It brings us near to Russia, China, and Japan. It contributes much to making the United States one of the great nations of the Pacific area.

The Battlemake

We were camped beside a lake, by a eucalyptus tree, some one hollored, “There’s a snake! It’s a rattler! Hully gee!”, then dived into rivers—no harm shall come to us—no harm shall come to us; we might throw.

And we threw with bated breath, five feet of writhing sin; battle, murder, sudden death, done up in a motled skin! Rocks were flying thick and fast, some thrown crooked, others straight, and the serpent to the last darted and struck. Bad luck! He is Ishmael, this snake, with his rattles on behind, which, when playing tunes, can wake terrors in the bravest mind. Hark to the barren lands, driven from the field and farm, even snakes of other brands view the rattler with alarm. He has a court at court, where snake advocates appear, but he is a dead game sport and a stranger to all fear. And I felt a sense of shame when we’d killed that mottled thing; we had played a tinbrough game, throwing bowl and ring, and the recreation makes lukewarm pains slide down my neck; even when we’re killing snakes sportsmanship should be on deck.

MECHANICAL HEN

Poultry raising has been developing very rapidly in Outagamie county and follows pretty close upon the heels of dairying in importance. The poultry farmer will be interested and amused to learn that if plans do not miscarry American poultry will be represented at the London poultry congress by a seven-foot hen which speaks English, French or Spanish—but lays only wooden eggs.

This wonderful hen is being built by the agricultural department of wood, wall board and a few feathers, with a lot of machinery inside. According to specifications, this is what you’d see if you could go to the sessions of the congress.

“Full vision gallery; extra large crop fitted with window; copper-lined stomach; flexible rubber intestines; variable speed control on gizzard (a grinding machine); a two-valve pumping apparatus.”

The reason for this particular kind of hen is to make her an exhibit in nutrition. The laying of wooden eggs is increased or slowed as the hen is given suitable or unsuitable food. A phonograph in its anatomy helps the hen to explain its ideas on proper nutrition in one of any several languages.

Moth Insurance Now Offered

The recent offer by a prominent manufacturer of cedar chests to insure purchasers against moth damage to clothing stored in his chests strikes the latest wrinkle in advertising and insurance. Policies in denominations of $250, $500 and $1,000, depending on the price of the chest, will be furnished purchasers who apply within two years after it leaves the factory. A card accompanies each chest, which the purchaser fills out and returns to the factory, when the insurance is automatically written up.

Insurance against moths would prove likewise business even for the ancient English underwriters. Every treatment planned to prevent or to kill them doesn’t live up to promise. A good insecticide job can be done once or twice a year with such chemical fumigates as hydrocyanic-acid, sulphur, carbon di-sulphate, paradichlo-benzene, pyrophosphate, carbon tetrachloride or carbon tetrachloride mixture, but in each case plenty of chemical must be used and the fumigating space must be carefully sealed. As a simple, practical measure for the protection of moth-sensitive materials the use of repellent of moth repelling oil or the treatment of goods with moth repellent solution (such as a 5% solution of dichloro-benzene, or a 2% solution of carbon tetrachloride) has been found to be effective.

High School Notes

Senior and faculty members should have their pictures taken, and their gloss prints in before Thanksgiving vacation, if they wish them to appear in the Clarion. This section is going to the engravers much earlier than usual this year.

The first six weeks period ends Friday, October 17. Report cards will be distributed in home rooms the following Thursday.

Televox, the mechanical man, will give a program in the assembly on Monday, October 13, at 8:10 A.M.
Televox comes through the Western Electric company. He will answer a telephone, and do as his master tells him during this conversation.

The next two Lyceum numbers come through the University Extension division. On October 16, the Music Box
Revue will entertain the students. On October 27, Glenn Morris, entertainer and magician, will perform.

The High school bands are preparing for the state tournament which will be held at Menasha in May. The first band plays at all the football and basketball games. The combined boys and girls chorus will appear in public some time during October. The band, orchestra, and chorus are preparing for the Fox River Valley Music festival which will be held again this year.

High school will be closed October 30-31 so that the teachers may attend the Milwaukee State Teachers' convention.

The regular meeting of the faculty was held last Tuesday. The topic or discussion was the teachers' summer experiences. Miss Esther Graef and Miss Bith Carter told of their experiences at summer school. Mr. Herbert Helfie told of his travels in the west. Miss Minne Smith told her adventures in her trip to Europe and Coach Shields, of his adventures in getting married.

A. H. S. ATHLETICS

By Norman Clapp
Appleton High school suffered its second defeat of the football season when the Orange squad lost to West Green Bay Saturday afternoon by the score of 21-7.

West scored all three of its touchdowns in the second quarter. The first was the result of a long period of play. The other two came in interterupting two Appleton passes deep in the Orange territory.

Coach Shields' team had two chances to score in the first half, but could not make either of them count.

Led by Captain Babino, Gene De
Young, and Byron Fargen, the Appleton High school cross country team defeated West's homers 23 to 32. Bab-ino came in first, DeYoung second, and Fargen third. West Green Bay took the next three places.

Coach Shields plans to get his swimming team practicing very soon. Several meets with neighboring schools are to be scheduled, and the team will probably go to the state meet this winter.
