Fifth Ward Voters Club Has Interesting Meeting

The Fifth Ward Voters club scored the city council for its policy of appropriating $300 for each of 20 band concerts to be given during the year by the 129th Field Artillery band, and also mounted a protest to the city council for its attitude toward a competitive bus company, in resolutions adopted at its meeting in the Insurance building Monday evening. The club members also heard a discussion of the incinerator plant by Alderman George Packard, who also explained the city financial system. The club was organized last spring to study municipal problems and projects, and to promote community welfare, particularly in the fifth ward. Daniel Leppin is president; R. C. Breitung, secretary; and Oscar Riches, treasurer.

Concerning the appropriation for band concerts, the resolution passed by the club is a protest to the work done by the Appleton High school band, for which no remuneration is given. The club went on record as opposing the payment of $300 to one commercial organization for each band concert presented, and favored giving a portion of this sum to aid the Appleton High School in furthering its musical program.

The resolution scoring the power company charged unfair competition against a competitor of the company in the waterworks business, and asked for permission to extend its service to parts of the fifth ward now served by the competing company.

State Accepting 1931 Automobile Fees

Secretary of State Theodore Damman began on Monday to collect automobile license fees for 1931. Until after December 15 only renewals will be received, barring newly purchased cars until that time. On December 16 the purchaser of a new car can get a license for 1931 without paying any fee for 1930. A new car purchased and used by the owner would have to pay half of the 1930 fee.

Amounts to be paid are the same as last year, although many owners are entitled to a “age” discount of 25 per cent of the fee. This applies only to cars known as 1926 models, now five years old, nor does it apply to cars that paid only 10, which is the minimum. There will be no renewal licensing of trailer or horse-drawn vehicles for truck license having been changed by the legislature to begin in the middle of the year.

On the James River bridge (4½ miles long), which connects Norfolk and Newport News, traffic is spaced up to 40 miles, or better, to avoid congestion.

MANTOWOC WILL LOWER WATER AND LIGHT RATES

Earnings of Mantowoc’s municipally owned light and water plans over a period of years are expected soon to show a decrease in rates on electricity for residences, business concerns, and small power users. Recently the state railroad rate commission, after a review of plants profits and conditions rates that were lowered, and the rate board’s recommendation has been given to the city council. Rates probably will be decreased from about 15 per cent for small users to 25 per cent for 125,000 consumers. This lowering of rates amounting to about $50,000 yearly is announced while half million dollar expansion program of the plant is under way.

Poultry Association Holds Exhibition

The Fox River Valley Poultry and Pet Stock Association is holding its annual show at Armory G with between 400 and 500 chickens, rabbits, and pigeons. The big show got underway Thursday when registrations and entries were received, and will continue through Sunday. Exhibits are entered from poultrymen and pet stock fanciers within a thirty mile radius of the city. Entries closed at 10 o’clock this morning, when the judging was started.

Today is children’s day and pupils of the Appleton schools were invited to attend the show after school. A. J. Shannon is assistant superintendent. George Wells of Oshkosh was the poultry judge and Max Gere of Hilbert judged the rabbits.

ASK FOR $138,466 FOR NEW DAM AT KAUKAUNA

In the annual report of the army engineer’s department sent to congress on the opening day of the present session, the legislature was asked for reconstruction of the government dam across the Fox River at Kaukauna.

The report seeks a total allotment of $155,500 for work on the Fox River during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1931. The timber crib dam at Kaukauna is badly decayed and of inadequate discharge capacity during flood seasons, according to the report.

The new dam will be of concrete, 40 feet high and 90 feet at the bottom. During the last year, traffic on the river totaled 325,734 tons valued at $1,479,190, an increase in both tonnage and value over 1928 when the total was 315,765 tons valued at $1,383,000. Coal made up 84 per cent of the cargoes with sand, gravel, clay, stone, farm and forest products making up the balance.

City Council Extends Tax Time

One Percent Added for Payments Made in February; Left Turns Permitted at Oneida St. & College Ave.; and Incinerator Bids Opened.

Tax time was extended by the city council at its meeting last Wednesday evening to February 28, with an additional collection fee of one per cent for all taxes paid after January 31. This is a change from the custom established three years ago when the tax period was extended without extra fee for collection during February. Alderman Vogt strenuously opposed the additional one per cent fee, asserting that this year, if ever, an extension of time was necessary and he believed the extra fee would only increase the hardship. Alderman Thompson answered that the one per cent extra fee would be an inducement for large taxpayers to pay during January, and that it was extremely necessary that some of these larger amounts be collected during that month so that the city would be in a financial position to meet its obligations. He said the extension of time without additional charge costs the city $4,000. On the other hand, he declared, the extra one per cent would make little difference to the small taxpayers. The resolution to extend time with the additional assessment for collection was carried. Alderman Vogt casting the only dissenting vote.

The ordinance prohibiting left turns on College avenue, was repealed by a vote of 10 to 2, Aldermen Thompson and Vanderheyden objecting to allowing the left turns at this point. Thompson cited the city’s error in allowing left turns at other corners where traffic signals had been installed and cautioned against adding another error to those already committed. However, he agreed that the city’s system should be uniform. Chief of Police Prim appeared before the council and reported on a count kept by his officers of the number of cars daily which attempted to make left turns at this corner. There were an average of 12 to 20 a day. The chief also stated that no difficulty was experienced at other corners where traffic signals had been installed and where left turns were permitted.

Bids for the construction of an incinerator plant were opened, and the council resolved itself into a committee of the whole to discuss the matter. Five bids were submitted, but the committee decided to make a thorough investigation from a practical standpoint before further action is taken. The board of public works was instructed to secure from all the bidders a list of all cities in the United States in which they had erected incinerators within the past five years. The committee will then make a detailed questionnaire, covering such points as smoke, dust, odor, fuel, efficiency, population of city, capacity of incinerator, court actions against incinerator company, and others which might help determine the efficiency of the plan corners where traffic signals had been installed and where left turns were permitted.

Field Artillery band, $6,000 for 25 concerts. The club expressed the belief that this was too large an amount and that the Appleton High School band ought to share in the distribution of money for band purposes. Edward F. Mummop spoke in defense of the band. He said the 129th Field Artillery band opens a way for students in the high school band to continue their musical career after they leave school, and that he now has in his organization 12 men who formerly were in the high school outfit. These musicians have been given instruction gratis by Mr. Mummop. He further stated that while parents are in a position to pay for the additional training, he does not have the money. He explained his attitude toward the band playing for commercial concerns on the presumption that it will share in the proceeds. He added also that the amount appropriated by the council does not pay the cost of the band, which is actually $9,000. In addition to the aid given by the city, Mr. Mummop is obliged to raise $5,000 from other sources. He expressed his attitude toward the high school band to counteract charge of jealousy. The 129th Field Artillery band, he explained, has won national recognition and given Appleton valuable advertising. He told the council members, too, that only recently he had an offer to leave Appleton and increase his earnings considerably, but that he declined because he felt it debited to the city for the boosting it had done for him. The petition was placed on file.

Henry Thiel, a farmer residing in the town of Greenville, was instantly killed and several other persons injured in two automobile accidents that occurred Wednesday evening on highway 76, one mile east of the Greenville station. Mr. Thiel and his daughter, Mrs. Selma Krueger, were driving east on highway 76 when their car skidded on an icy path in the road and struck a car driven by Mrs. Martha Lyons, of Atwater, who was going west. The Thiel car tore off the left rear wheel of the Lyons car, and the entangled cars blocked the road. While the occupants of the cars were discussing the accident, a car driven by George Mavis, of Appleton, was observed approaching from the east at a high rate of speed. According to Mrs. Krueger, Mr. Thiel stepped out in the road to flag down the Mavis car, believing it impossible for the auto to pass through. Apparently the Mavis car also skidded, struck Mr. Thiel, killing him instantly and then turned over in the ditch. Mavis, an employee of the August Brandt company, was taking two Shawano men back to their homes, and Mrs. Mavis was accompanying him on the trip.

Mavis declares that he saw the cars in the road, and also saw three figures in front of him, but did not see Mr. Thiel attempting to stop him. When he observed the three people, he swung his car into the ditch, but he states he did not at any time see Mr. Thiel.

Martin Brunner, Lynnhurst, who was riding with Mavis, sustained several cuts on his head, which were dressed at a physician’s office. John M. Toll, Shawano, also an occupant of the Mavis car, suffered minor bruises. Mr. and Mrs. Mavis, and Mrs. Krueger are confined to St. Elizabeth hospital.

Mr. Thiel is survived by three daughters, Mrs. William Wittbach, Oshkosh; Mrs. Selma Krueger, Greenville; Mrs. Lester Reisenweber, Ellington; four sons, Leonard, Marshall, Minn.; Harry, Greenville; Dewey, Greenleaf, and Lester, Greenville; one brother, John of Seymour; three sisters, Mrs. Annie Sabich, Mrs. Mary Reitz, of Appleton; and Mrs. Rose Urban, Melvin, Wis. Nineteen grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 1:45 Sunday afternoon and at 2 o’clock at the Evangelical church at Greenville. The Rev. W. F. Berg will conduct the services. Burial will be in the town of Greenville cemetery.

A Capella Choir Presents Vesper Service Program

Lawrence college a cappella choir will present the program at the vesper service at the First Methodist Episcopal church next Sunday afternoon. There are sixty singers in this college choir and they have been rehearsing twice weekly since the opening of school preparing the repertoire which they are to sing at this concert and at later concerts during the winter and spring season.

The program Sunday will be made up of standard selections from the most noted composers of the Russian school, a group of songs and part songs suitable to the Christmas season as well as vocal solos and motets for mixed voices and part songs for women’s voices.

The choir is under the direction of Dean Carl J. Waterman. Soloists will be Hazel Gleo, soprano; Lois Shilling, mezzo soprano, and Mr. Waterman.

Proceeds of Luckner Lecture Used for Relief

Oney Johnston post will use proceeds from the Count von Luckner lecture for relief work among war veterans this winter. The entertainment by the famous German warrior will serve a dual-purpose, according to legion committees in charge of the program, in that it will offer a delightful evening’s entertainment and will also assist in swelling the fund which will lighten the burden of unfortunate biddies this winter.

The lecture next Wednesday evening will be von Luckner’s second appearance in this city. On his first appearance he held his audience spellbound by his tales of adventure. His stories do not grow old, and the demand for tickets for the second lecture here indicates that the former allied enemy has endeared himself to the hearts of Appletonians.

Members of the post are considering plans for the entertainment of Count von Luckner during his stay in the city. Similar plans last year were frustrated, when von Luckner, leisurely puffing at his pipe, simply took the stage after the dinner, and himself furnished entertainment.

M. G. Clark, valley scout executive, has announced a new medal available to Wisconsin scouts. A gold honor bronze for conservation work and permanent protection of wildlife will be given each year during Scout Anniversary week by Haskell Noyes, Milwaukee, member of the state conservation commission. Several methods may be employed to win the medal, including supporting of game laws; study of wild life protective laws; maintaining winter feeding stations; and forming clubs for protection of wild life. Evidence of services rendered must be filed by December 31 and must cover a period of at least one year. Credentials are to be submitted to the regional scout headquarters in Chicago.

George Jacobson, Kaukauna, was re-elected president of the Fox River Valley Beekeepers’ association at its annual meeting recently. Other officers re-elected are Victor Leppa, vice president; and Edward Hassinger, Greenville, secretary and treasurer. Cornelius Meyer was elected a delegate to the state beekeepers’ convention at Madison Thursday and Friday.

Mr. Jesse Westfield and sons Edward and Percy of Ashland, Ohio, who have been visiting Mr. Westfield’s mother and brother, Mrs. A. Alidrich and Francis Alidrich, have returned to their home in Ohio.

Leading progressives from all sections of the state have been called to meet at Madison Saturday with Philip La Follette to consider methods of handling legislative matters. After a conference with officials of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor, Mr. La Follette announced that the program of the labor organization is in harmony with Progressive views.

Facing a deficit of $500,000 for the last fiscal year, Postmaster General Walter Brown urges a letter postal rate of 2½¢ an ounce.

to Mr. W. B. Basing, the local representative of the Northwestern railroad, its appreciation of this prompt action. An undesirable state of affairs was called to his attention and it was rectified immediately. If officials of all public service corporations took a similar attitude in their dealings with the public, there would be much less agitation against them and fewer demands for laws to regulate them.

EXPOSING ILICIT SLAYERS OF GAME

The duties of the average game warden today are rather difficult at best, but with the hunting season they are apt to become more so. He usually has a large area to cover. The lawless minority, those who feel their rights are curtailed by law, fight him at every turn and try to defeat his efforts at law enforcement.

We ask ourselves what is, or should be, the honest sportsman’s attitude? Does he help the game warden in his duties? Or does he stand idly by leaving the official an almost superhuman task to perform?

There exists in this country more than in any other nation on the face of the earth, with the possible exception of England, a great distaste for “tattlers.” That is as it should be.

We grew up with that idea. But there is a growing feeling that intentional violations of the fish and game laws fall in a category which makes reporting them a thing entirely apart from the ordinary “tattle bearing.”

As the chief warden of one of our states puts it, “When a man wilfully breaks the fish and game laws, he is robbing us just about as directly as a burglar would. If he shoots a female deer, for instance, in violation of the law, he is robbing us of hundreds of future chances of shooting a buck. Yet, a great number of sportsmen, even if they personally see this wilful violation, hesitate to report it because they feel that it is not a manly thing to do.

“If a thug should hold us up and take our watch and money, we would leave no stone unturned to see him apprehended. What is the difference between this and stealing our chances to enjoy good honest sports?”

FOR UNIT BANKING

It must be gratifying to Appleton banks, and others opposing chain banking, to note the marked change of sentiment expressed at recent banking conventions.

Resolutions adopted at the Cleveland convention of the American Bankers’ Association, strongly favored the American system of unit banking, as peculiarly adapted to the highly diversified community life of the United States and deprecated any undue centralization of banking.

However, modern transportation facilities and other economic changes will necessitate some readjustment here as in other fields of business. Taking cognizance of this fact, the resolution goes on to say that the “association believes in the economic desirability of community-wide branch banking in metropolitan areas and county-wide branch banking in rural districts where economically justified. The association supports in every respect the autonomy of the laws of the separate states in respect to banking. No class of banks in the several states should enjoy greater rights in respect to the establishment of branches than banks chartered under the state laws.”

Leading bankers consider this a sensible conclusion and very different from the more or less sensational proposals put forth a year ago touching the expansion of branch, group and chain banking on state-wide, trade-wide, etc., not nation-wide lines. “The fundamental concept of democracy is individual liberty, individual initiative, individual opportunity, and is in complete opposition to concentration, concentration of wealth and power and opportunity.”

The attitude of the bankers at their Cleveland convention seems to indicate that they see the seriousness of a danger which seems to be “threatening one of the great foundation stones of American democracy.”

LA FOLLETTE GOES TO WORK

Governor-elect Philip La Follette has started on his new job discharging some preliminary duties, chief among which are the conferences with the budget director and hearings on the proposed budget requests. These financial hearings are required by the new state budget law, one of the wise changes made under the Kohler administration.

Judging by his campaign declarations it is expected Mr. La Follette will authorize few additional expenditures, after his proposed two weeks’ analysis of state expenditures and receipts. It will be remembered that the governor-elect has announced that expenses must be kept within the revenues and he advocates an immediate tax revision which will increase the rate on net incomes of over $5,000.

If this law is enacted tax experts predict it will be possible to eliminate state taxes which now amount to over $4,000,000, the proposed goal of La Follette tax advisors.

HELPING THE FARMER

Governor Kohler has shown alertness as to the interests of the Wisconsin dairy industry in calling upon President Hoover to raise the tariff on butter in an effort to check declining prices.

The President was quick to respond, asking the tariff commission to recommend an immediate increase. That there is need for such action is apparent in the fact that during the past two weeks Australian representatives have offered 10,000,000 pounds of Australian butter for twenty-three and twenty cents a pound. These offers brought about a slump in prices, although no Australian butter has yet been unloaded. Actual deliveries might be expected to have still more adverse effects on the American market. This was certainly one situation in which the “flexible” provisions in the tariff bill have justified themselves.
LOCAL

A group of Appleton young people will present the play "Pigs!" under the direction of John Robson, the latter part of January. The proceeds of the play will be donated to the city's poor fund. The cast will be selected from talent in the city, Richard Kottke will be the production manager.

The December meeting of the Wisconsin Harness Horse association will be held at the Park hotel, Madison, next week Friday. An effort will be made by the horse fanciers to prolong the racing season, so that more than two months' racing may be provided to offset the long racing period. The election of fair secretaries will also be sought in an effort to have fairs held over a longer period instead of grouped in a period of a few weeks in the fall. Charles Hofopsenger, local horse fancier, was elected at the meeting.

Joseph Pierre, a farmer residing on route 1, sustained a badly lacerated left hand when that member became caught in a feed cutter, Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Pierre was taken to St. Elizabeth hospital where it was found necessary to amputate the hand just below the wrist.

A. M. Metting, county superintendent of schools, attended the annual meeting of the Wisconsin County Superintendent of Schools association at Madison Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. Mr. Metting gave a talk on "Reporting on Visits to School Boards" at the Wednesday session.

The city's work for bridge tenders and street cleaners for this season has been completed and the men employed at that work during the summer and fall months have been released. Twenty persons were affected by the closing of street work. Cleaning of catch basins will be completed this week, which will result in several additional men being dropped from the city payroll.

Appleton reserve officers who are taking a course in the group school will meet at the Armory G this evening. An outcome of a battle situation is the subject being studied by the officers at the present time. Captain A. P. Lapce is the instructor.

James Morrow, 14 years old, son of Mr. Frank Morrow, 415 Monroe, suffered a fractured leg in a fall on the ice pond in Pierce Park. He is confined to his home.

William Irving, 20 year old Menominee Indian, was sentenced to six months in the county jail by Judge Theodore Harg when he pleaded guilty to breaking into a box car on the Soo railroad. Irving was arrested at Shawano Saturday by J. H. Johnson, an employee of the railroad company, who found the Indian in the car on which the door seal had been broken. Irving declared he boarded the car at Neenah and broke it at Appleton, so that he might have a warmer place to ride in on his way to his home in Neopit.

Michael Gochnauer, Appleton, and Miss Mary Leicht were elected treasurer and secretary, respectively, of the sophomore class of Lawrence college to fill vacancies created by the failure of the incumbent officers to return to school this fall. Roy Marston and Elizabeth Clemons are president and vice-president of the class.

John N. Would, city building inspector, has appointed a committee of four housing men to draft a new heating ordinance. The old one is incomplete and not applicable to present conditions. The committee consists of Chester Heinritz, Frank Parr, William Schultz, and D. A. Bank.

Thieves early Sunday morning entered the pig sty on the farm of Joseph Stoefel, route 2, Appleton, selected a choice hog weighing about 275 pounds, slaughtered the animal outside the pen dressed it, and carried it away, leaving the undesirable parts in the farmer's yard. The hog was worth about $30.

R. S. O'Connell, who also lives in the neighborhood of route 2, reported the loss of five cords of wood. The wood had been sawed into stove length and piled in the yard to cure. O'Connell is offering a reward of $5 for information which will result in the arrest of the thieves.

Within a few days a deputy federal marshal from the office of United States Marshal J. N. Fittimore will place in a padlock during the summer and fall months ago. The cases of Howard Campbell and Charles Jorgenson, arrested in connection with the raid, are still pending in federal court at Milwauk ee.

Mrs. Ella Burmeister, 42, town of Seymour, was given an absolute divorce from her husband, Bernhard Burmeister, 48, town of Cicero, by Judge Theodore Berg. Cruel and inhuman treatment was charged. The couple have eleven children, six of whom are affected by the decree. Mrs. Burmeister was given custody of the children and $10 a month alimony for six months, after which time $20 a month is to be paid. The suit was not contested.

The Tipira orchestra, celebrated Mexican musicians who will appear at the Lawrence Memorial chapel this evening as the third number of the Community Artists series, gave a special concert for school children this afternoon. The orchestra is directed by Senor Torrerblanca, who made his first appearance in this country fifteen years ago. Members of the organization wear the native charro costume of Mexico.

John Asman, Appleton, hanged himself in a barn on the farm of his mother in the town of Union, Waupaca County, early Tuesday morning. Mr. Asman apparently left his home in Appleton Monday night and went directly to the barn where he ended his life. No motive for the deed is known. The family, which consists of the wife and two children, was preparing to make its home in the newly acquired property on W. Wisconsin avenue. They had been sharing the house at 808 N. Lowe street with Mrs. Asman's brother, Charles Krueger.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry M. Wriston have received a set of dishes, copies of Wiegwood of an old set unearthed some time ago on the campus of Harvard University. The gift was received from Bishop William Lawrence.

Roy Winters, Iron Mountain, Mich., was a witness in the trial of W. P. Davis, charged with robbing the State Bank of Nichols on September 10, and was arraigned on charges of perjury. Judge Theodore Berg ordered Winters taken into custody on Tuesday when District Attorney Stuull presented evidence indicating that Winters may have given false testimony on the witness stand. Winters was called to aid in establishing an alibi for Davis. Davis had the stand most of the time on Tuesday and refused to change his story that he was in Iron Mountain the day the bank was robbed. He also denied the story of Frank Manosco, the state's star witness.

The annual meeting of the Outagamie County Guernsey Breeders association will be held next Wednesday, December 10, at Hotel Northern. New officers will be elected and activities for 1931 will be discussed.

called upon to foot the bills by making the proper appropriations. But, whenever a profit over and above operating expenses has accrued, the waterworks department puts that in a special fund.

Pamela, I would like to have you explain in your editorial that we have not been able to retire some of the outstanding bonds and to make some necessary improvements at the plant, instead of taking money from the taxpayers. If the $17,700 bond issue for the waterworks plant during 1930 had been from that surplus instead of from the general fund, the city would have been able to reduce the bond loans by just that much. And dozens of other taxpayers will have to borrow money this winter to pay our taxes, while the waterworks department builds up a big surplus fund.

What They Say

The Waterworks Surplus

Editor Review: Last summer when the waterworks commission wanted to build a new plant and improve the fair ground, much was said about the big surplus this department had built up. If I remember correctly, it is more than $130,000. Money from this surplus was to be used to erect the new building and it would not cost the taxpayers a cent.

A few weeks ago, you published an editorial congratulating the citizens of Appleton because it had an unusually efficient waterworks commission, which was able to apply to the state for permission to reduce its rates at a time when three other cities in the state wanted to raise theirs. That was very fine and it made us all proud of our waterworks.

In an editorial this week about "City Expenditures for 1930" you list an item of $37,789 for "Waterworks Improvements," and another item of $41,000 for "Bonds to be Retired." (Editor’s note: The bonds retired during the past year were $35,000 for junior high schools and $36,000 waterworks bonds.)

If I understand these figures correctly, they mean that the city pays the bonds issued when the waterworks plant was purchased and modernized. Whenever any repairs or improvements are necessary at the plant, the city is

The Incinerator

Editor Review: Some of the people who object to the construction of an incinerator plant within the city limits should take the trouble to inform themselves, so that they will realize how unreasonable their attitude is. Oshkosh is only 20 miles away and it would only take a couple of hours time any day to run down there and look at that incinerator. It would be a revelation to the kickers, because it is so absolutely clean and smokeless. And then they object to hauling garbage through the streets. Why don’t they suggest one method of disposing of it without hauling it? That the plant is located outside the city the garbage will have to be hauled to the plant and if the plant is outside the city the garbage will have to be hauled just that much farther and over so many more streets.

How To Play The New Backgammon
By Lelia Hattersley

LESSON VIII
Opening Moves

You Are in the Position of White

For a game so largely dependent upon chance as is Backgammon, it is impossible to lay down hard-and-fast rules of play. With the progress of a game, its aspects constantly change, new factors appear and disappear, a single throw of the dice may be sufficient to cause an overwhelming shift of the odds in favor of one player or the other.

At the same time, certain general suggestions may be given which are best to prove helpful to the novice. Thus, too, it is possible to learn how expert players utilize their opening throws to the best advantage in moving their men. Any Backgammon player can readily familiarize himself with the best strategy in opening moves, most of which was settled upon more than two hundred years ago, with all of our modern improvements in Backgammon, little change has been made in the tables of best opening plays as listed by Hoyle, and played, as notes a writer of his day, "in all the polite circles.""

With the addition of a few modern innovations and some comments of my own, I have arranged these classic opening moves in a manner which I believe will greatly facilitate their study.

A Special Arrangement of the Classic Initial Moves

With some modern innovations and comments in the special arrangement of initial moves shown below, it will be noted that doubles are included. As the first move is made by the higher player using the combined numbers of his own and his opponent's throw, it cannot occur on doubles. But the second throw may be doubles, and at that stage the original positions are not apt to be materially altered. Also, in cases where alternative moves are shown, it is highly probable that one or another can still be made to advantage, even after two or three throws.

NOTE:— Favorable opening moves will be explained in the next issue.

Needlework Guild
Seeks New Members

Offers Easy Way to Help Unfortunates

Appleton people who have heard of distress among the unfortunate people of the city and who have felt the urge to do something to help them, now have that opportunity. The Needlework Guild of America has opened a simple way.

Two years ago the West End Reading Club sponsored the institution of a branch of the guild in this city. The membership requirement is so liberal that persons who do not feel that their circumstances permit them to give large amounts of money or clothing, may assist in the work done by the guild. All that is required to belong to this organization, which is national in scope, is the contribution of two new articles of wearing apparel, as, for example, two pairs of mittens, two pairs of stockings, two nightgowns, or two of any other garment suitable for man, woman, or child. However, the greatest need is for clothing for school children. The articles must be new.

The material contributed is distributed to needy persons thru charitable organizations, and the donor may designate through which organization he desires his donation dispensed. The garments are not given directly to individuals. The organizations assisting in the distribution are the Catholic Relief Association, City Relief Society, German Ladies' Aid society, Jewish Ladies' Aid society, and the Salvation Army. Persons who secure donations of clothing from ten donors and one cash gift become directors.

Officers of the Needlework Guild in this city are Mrs. Otto Kuehmsted, honorary president; Mrs. J. A. Wood, president; Mrs. A. G. Meating, vice president; Mrs. George F. Werner, secretary; and Mrs. L. H. Moore, treasurer. Directors are Mrs. Leda Clark, Mrs. Otto Kuehmsted, Mrs. P. H. Ryan, Mrs. Peter Thom, Mrs. A. F. Tuttle, and Mrs. James A. Wood. Since the guild was organized in Appleton two years ago 150 garments have been distributed in the city and county.

The drive for new members will be conducted during December, and guild members urge the contributions of garments as Christmas welfare work. The organization has been approved by the Chamber of Commerce. Any person in the city who wishes to join the guild may prepare two new articles of clothing and get in touch with any of the officers or directors. There is no other expense connected with membership. Two new garments pays a year's dues.

FARMER CHARGED WITH STEALING NEIGHBOR'S CALF

Joseph Freund, a farmer living on route 2, west of Appleton, was arrested on a charge of larceny, robbery, resisting an officer, and concealing stolen property, and placed under $500 bonds for hearing in court December 11. Freund is alleged to have stolen a calf from the farm of Emil Smith, a neighbor. Automobile tracks in the Smith yard coincided with those made by Freund's car. Smith investigated and found blood stains in the barn on the Freund farm. The sheriff's office was notified and Under Sheriff Edward Lutz assigned to the job. When questioned by Lutz, Freund claimed he had killed one of his own calves, and had burned the pelt. He refused to show the officer the carcass and resisted arrest. On Monday officers searched the premises and found the head and feet of the animal. The head was identified by Mr. Smith as that of his missing calf, which was valued at $75.

INSTALLMENT V

His fingers touched the cold iron. He hesitated in the moment he was lifting it, uncertain whether to open the door by a space of a few inches. Through this aperture a voice came to him, a voice that was faint, faintly biting, angry voice, and he recognized it as Madame Tonteau's. He raised the handle, and the door of the cell was thrown open. He would have knocked when he heard a name which made him pause in rigid stillness.

He heard Tonteau's mother say, "Henri Bulain was a fool for marrying this coot. He is not a Frenchman, and Emmond is a greater fool for not driving her from the country when they hear that they are free. They never look at us."

The place they have built should be burned and the English woman and her boy sent where they belong. Let Henri Bulain and his mother choose to be a renegade instead of a Frenchman!"

"I am sorry for you, my child," Henrietta, the milder voice of Madame Tache, "I despise the English, but I am sorry for you, my child."

He was angry because she is English and her boy is English, and yet they are allowed to live among us as if they were French. Why will they not be treated the same way as the other French?

"I think Jeems' mother is nice," he said to himself, "she is English and a detestable little English beast!"

"And some day that beast will help to cut our throats," added her mother unpleasantly.

The great iron kow had a cruel design. He was to go to Emmond and throw the door open. The thought had a strange fascination. It was almost as if he were riding a servant's ears, the door swung open and Jeems stalked in. The workman paused in his place and opened the wide opening to the room in which they were seated. He seemed to see more clearly what was going on, and then he lowered the gage of his gun only at Tonteau. He remained for a moment without movement or speech, his eyes set firmly on the two men. Then with a piano stroke he bowed his head in a courtesy which Katherine had carefully taught him. When he spoke, it was as if he were among friends as those of Madame Tache had been. He had seen to come tell me I am sorry because I am acting. My mother, Tonteau's mother, said.

"I ask you, my friends, how do you like your English?"

Even Henriette Tonteau could not have thought of him as a beast after that. She was not too much taken with his bearing in his place of the white shirt and the English collar, but she found his voice, he drew back quietly and disappeared as if he had never been there. The big Frenchman met him, and turning to a window near her mother's place, he asked: "Where are my steps?"

An exclamation of indignation and amazement came at last from her mother, but this she did not hear. Her eyes were following Jeems.

He went across the open and into the fields. As he drew near the foot of Tontre Hill, Odd came cautiously forth to meet him but not until they reached their old resting place at the foot of the wall. Jeems noticed that Henry's eyes were seeing with a new and darker vision. From the rich valley which had been seen in a dream, it turned to the faint gleam of distant faces. He approached Lake Champlain, and beyond, where Lake Champlain, and beyond, where, a long time. He would receive no answer, he would not come, they would know he was dead.

When Henri got out of his bed to see the weather, there was a snowstorm over the north when the island was gone. He had stolen off like a shadow in still hour of the night.

More determined than when his uncle had been with him, Jeems continued his work and at the mental efforts which with him was striving to reach out into the mountains and the hills and the valleys of the island, and watch over them. The winter was cold, the world was covered with snow, and a welcome were always there. Jeems' friendship for them remained with them. Jeems' life was full of the entre of his kind. He had told them, and while he brought his faith, he watched and watched and listened for the signs of hidden dangers which his was to guard against. The French had taken theբ, and all the islands. Most of the Indians were from the Canada tribes, and among them were the French. The French had told them that these islands were to be used for the harvesting of crops. A fort night after they had gone, Peter told them that the French had told them that they had not come to the island. They had decided to take the islands and build a fort on them. Jeems had predicted a future war for the Mohawks.

Jeems was left in his bed in the adventure. Captain Pipe, the old Canadian, had a habit of speaking to the Indians. He had told them that the islands were to be used for the harvesting of crops. A fort night after they had gone, Peter told them that the French had told them that they had not come to the island. They had decided to take the islands and build a fort on them. Jeems had predicted a future war for the Mohawks.

To Tonteau and his people away from the seigneurie, Jeems had no hesitation in giving them the islands. He had made trips there with his father on his way to the islands. He had told them that the islands were to be used for the harvesting of crops. A fort night after they had gone, Peter told them that the French had told them that they had not come to the island. They had decided to take the islands and build a fort on them. Jeems had predicted a future war for the Mohawks.

Even if she were not smiling on Tontre as warmly as she had supposed, he would have been in the truth. He had been there only a short time, and if he saw no sign of the sun rising, he had determined to keep his mission. He would have found her, gave a determined impetus to his plans for the future. He would have been able to carry out her own wishes, and to bring to her a deeper and more understanding passion for his mother, and thus have had the qualities in his father, was harrassed by a malady of emotions which he related to his uncle to hear. He had told the Bulains, and with his two sons, White Eyes and Big Cat, Jeems traveled there. The French painted the islands for the first time. He was a week and planned with his friends to go to the islands. He had told them that the islands were to be used for the harvesting of crops. A fort night after they had gone, Peter told them that the French had told them that they had not come to the island. They had decided to take the islands and build a fort on them. Jeems had predicted a future war for the Mohawks.

As another spring and summer followed those which had gone before, the French and the Indians, those that had to be conquered, a yearning for Tontre which filled him with a strange and unknown weakness. For two years Tonteau remained in Quebec without making attempt to visit the Richelieu. During these years, the tragedy of his divided birth was forced upon Jeems. There was no doubt that his foot was marked by the day in which the earth was the southern frontiers and the cold was the north. Yes, he loved the place where he lived with a single person, peace, the golden valley, all the wilderness about him as far as he could see. He was the son of New France. It was his father's country and not his mother's. Between his father's home and his mother's he walked and grew up which nothing could break, but his worship for his mother was a kind of worship which was broken. His mother's brood bound him to her. His friends had increased in number, and his worship for his mother was a kind of worship which did not grow. Richelieu but was always conscious he was not entirely one of them. He had been true to his mother, who had been true to him in his memory and kept recalling this truth.

A full day had been passed at the second time of her absence, Tonteau returned to Tontre on the night of her return. Jeems' mother was there, and Peter was there, and they did not go to the seigneurie. Paul Tache and his mother were also at Tontre. They had met, and they had exchanged stories. Jeems had recognized Tonteau, he said. She had grown taller and more beautiful than he had known her. She was a grown man and dressed like a young woman. Jeems had recognized her, and it seemed to him that he was desperately in love with Tonteau, Peter avowed. But if he were to go there, he would have no favor. He had considered himself to be that, Tache was a long way from a realization of his love. He was, at one time, for a long time into consideration. She granted him no favors. There actually was a impediment in his heart toward him.

Peter's words stirred Jeems with a sense of loneliness in his heart, and he turned to his mother's house. Soon after, he went to Tontre and to his mother's house. Even if she were not smiling on Tontre as warmly as she had supposed, he would have been in the truth. He had been there only a short time, and if he saw no sign of the sun rising, he had determined to keep his mission. He would have found her, gave a determined impetus to his plans for the future. A fort night after they had gone, Peter told them that the French had told them that they had not come to the island. They had decided to take the islands and build a fort on them. Jeems had predicted a future war for the Mohawks.

Almost at the door to Jeems' home, war preparations were in progress, for the islands. Jeems' mother was there, and Peter was there, and they did not go to the seigneurie. Paul Tache and his mother were also at Tontre. They had met, and they had exchanged stories. Jeems had recognized Tonteau, he said. She had grown taller and more beautiful than he had known her. ...ing of missiles at Tontine manor. Being free from the seigneurial protection and laws, Henri did not go to drill. Nor did Jeems. Yet Tontine rode frequently, and when they rode, Jeems was there. He was in better spirits than he had been for some time, and every time he returned to the manor, the people on the other side of the fence welcomed him, for they had known him since the days when Henri was a child.

In the autumn of 1754, after four years at school, Tontine returned to Tontine manor.

The peace and happiness that followed the return of the Jeems and their friends was all the more apparent because of the recent war, which had destroyed so many homes and lives. The people of the region were grateful for the safety and security of their homes, and they were happy to be able to enjoy the beauty of the countryside without fear of war.

The Jeems, too, were grateful for the peace and security of their home. They were happy to be able to spend their time together, enjoying the beauty of the countryside and the company of their friends.

She had slightly nodded, her lips had barely formed a name.

Later, after the feast on the green, came Tontine's spectacular feature of the day, a military review of his tenants, with wives and children witnessing the martial display. The male guests, who had dripped in their own seigneurial splendour, grumbled that the women had not shown them anything. Henri, sensitive to the fact, and to save Catherine from the fear which might arise because of it, started with her over the homeward trail half an hour before. Jeeves had remained. This was his answer to Tontine's contention—that he was not of her people; that his world was not circumscribed by the petty boundaries of the seigneurial. He stood with his long rifle in the crook of his arm, conscious that she was looking at him, her eyes, poisoned with their deadened, starched him with the thrill of a painful triumph. He could almost hear her calling him an English beast again. A coward, One to be distrusted and watched. He did not sense humiliation or regret, but only a final widening of what had always lain between them.

Maybe you are already head over heels in cookie making, and out of your oven are marching realistic gingerbread men for the smallest children, tender almond stars, crunchy white sugar cookies, spicy pfeffernusse, Tucker's shortbread, German spritzgeb, Lobau's cardamom cookies, and a dozen other delicious concoctions that help to make Christmas at your house and go out in dainty wrapings to your friends and to those absent members of the family.

Space does not permit printing many rules, but here are a few that will help you, if you have no tried and true ones of your own, at least to be considered, it is wise to use simple batter for a plain sugar, molasses, or butter cookie and make them interesting in shape and decoration. There are so many intriguing cutters and bright candles and sugar to work with, and all so inexpensive.

Most any sort of Christmas cakes and cookies can be had in our very excellent bakeries, if you are too busy to make them yourself, but something very intimate and homey goes out of the Christmas season if all the preparations are made outside the home. Try at least one or two kinds yourself. If there is some particular recipe you would like, write and ask.

Pfeffernusse
Beat well together 2 cups sugar and 4 eggs; bland and grate 6 oz. almonds and cut fine 4 oz. citron and 2 oz. orange peel—or use the grated rind of 1 lemon or orange, as preferred. Stir 4 cups flour, 3 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, and 1 teaspoon baking powder. Mix all together well. Butter hands and shape mixture into balls about the size of a hickory nut; place on paper-covered tins an inch apart. Let stand over night. Bake in a moderate oven. Set away for two weeks before using.

A variation of this is an old German rule called Gingernuts: Stir a pound of sugar and the yolks of four eggs until very frothy, then work in 3/4 oz. ginger, 1/2 oz. cinnamon, some grated lemon peel, a pinch of ground cloves and a pound of flour. Roll out about 1/4 inch thick and with a small (1 inch in diameter) round cutter cut out the cakes and place on buttered and floured baking sheet; bake in a moderate oven to a nice color.

Sprinkle
Beat the yolks of 4 eggs until very light and thick, whites until dry; then beat together, added grated rind of 1 lemon, and 1 lb. powdered sugar sifted, very gradually, beating all the time; then add about 4 cups flour sifted with 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, and 1 tablespoon almond extract, and pour it into a mortar. Knead, cover closely and let chill two or three hours; then roll, a small piece at a time, into a thin sheet. Sprinkle lightly with flour and press the wooden spritzgeb mould down very hard, to leave a perfect impression of the picture on the dough. Cut out the little squares and set aside about 10 hours, or over night to dry on a lightly floured board. Place on buttered cloth and a pinch of cinnamon; bring slowly to the boiling point and simmer for 15 minutes.

Prepare a meringue by boiling together 1 cupful sugar and 2 tablespoons water without stirring, until it spins a thread, then pour in one-half the stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs; add the boiling grape liquid, dust lightly with grated nutmeg and serve at once.

Christmas Sacks
These are an interesting novelty. Make a rich pastry, roll it and form into little square sacks, stuffing them with raised raisins, or other similar dainty. Gather the top a bit but leave an opening. Bake until the crust is well done and delicately browned. Serve on individual plates with a few raisins at the mouth of the sack, as if spilling out of it.

Another Hobby
(Dedicated to my little boy and girl friends.)

Dear Boys and Girls:
I was to tell you about a hobby that is different—perhaps not new, but not common. It costs absolutely nothing and best of all, it will keep you out of doors, and you will come home with rosy cheeks and hungry enough to eat almost anything!

This is what it is—collecting birds' eggs. "I know," somebody says, "birds' eggs." Oh, dear no, I don't approve of that hobby at all—collecting birds' eggs!

This is a splendid time to begin; the little wet places are frozen over, there's no snow to speak of, and all the leaves are gone from the "summer trees" and the birds' nests.

It is easy to know where Madam Robin built her nest. Fact is, I think she likes us to know. But Madam Oriole and Mrs. Vireo were more secretive and many of their nests are to be found in the trees that are completely hidden by foliage earlier.

Birds rarely use a nest the second time; some orioles have been known to but it is unusual. I knew two robins who added fresh mud and used the nest after two years, but I don't think they expect to, though I do imagine that orioles like to build a second and third year in the same tree.

What fun it is to find the unusual nests. The little chopping sparrows', carefully and laboriously made of crinkly roosters' first, then horse hair woven round and round, and sometimes human hair, as I knew one to be.

Perhaps with some one's help you may get a lodge made by the one shown in the picture here some weeks ago! Study that. See how the little worker wound the twine (if she had human friends to supply it), otherwise, milkweed fiber, round and round she twirled it, over which she tuggepd and pulled up close to the nest, and which grew more and more leaves until her little cradle was completely hidden.

Cathbirds build their nests of the fur and stuff! Once we were "out hunting" and we heard a rustling and found a cathbird's nest made entirely of trimmings of white paper. How funny to be a-nesting on such a rattling,

Paderewski Concerts Enjoyed by All Ages

How the Paderewski concerts are bringing out a remarkable cross section of the American people is disclosed in the Boston Evening Transcript in a report on the performances in that city. The audience was not the typical concert crowd but included all walks of life.

A quarter past eight the preparatory gong changed through Symphony Hall. Twenty minutes past, nearly everyone was in place in the seats, not one of which was empty; on the standing room, to the limits of the police regulations; behind the railings was a fine line of seated guests. The pianist. (His piano was so set that he might be unaugured by listeners too close at hand.) Three minutes later the center doors opened, and through them entered Ignaz Jan Paderewski in the first of his seventy-first year.

As New Englanders might say, Mr. Paderewski’s step was ‘spiry’, while time, for once gentle, had spared the abundant locks, still tawny. With one

REVISING STATE BUDGET

By Fred L. Holmes

Governor-elect Philip F. La Follette has notified state officials that he is giving further state support that must justify their expendi- tures.

The first message of La Follette came at budget hearings and he has ordered all state departments to submit short written statements showing what the state got for the money spent as well as an itemized statement as to the amount spent. The governor-elect de- clared that the mere fact that a depart- ment is getting a certain appropriation is no reason why it should continue to get that amount unless it can show that it is giving the people their money's worth.

Wherever possible La Follette has de- manded that the department show in dollars and cents what the people have gained by expenditures. In some cases, La Follette said, a complete report may show that an appropriation is unneces- sary. In other cases, he declared, a re- port might bring out the fact that a department has only been able to scratch the surface of a vital problem and is warranted in asking for a big in- crease for a positive state service.

In their final budgeting of financial needs for the next two years La Fol- lette said he wanted to consider the pressuring need in the present depres- sion and be governed accordingly.

While not expressing an opinion, the governor-elect has gone into questions of departments hiring special counsel for the purpose of seeing to it that the state is being hexed by private attorneys. He asked whether the states should not be more interested in re- habilitating veterans leaving housing of the disabled to the national govern- ment. He also suggested that such arrange- ments might be made to have the attor- neys general's department represent the state in its law suits in all cases.

City Council Again Extends Tax Time

The council in the fifth ward, charging that unfair com- petition was being attempted against the company now operating there, the petition was referred to the city attor- ney.

The council also approved Class A licenses to Theodore Losee and Charles Kneuer, ordered the procuring of deeds to certain property on River road and the subsequent grading and graveling of the road; the ordinance committee was instructed to draw up an ordinance on heavy trucking in the city; elec- tricians licenses were granted to R. E. Burmeister and Clarence Schulze; bids for the Fourth street sewer were re- jected, and a petition presenting against the dump on the east side of Pierce park was referred to the committee on streets and bridges; and a petition oppos- ing installation of an inceinerator in the city limits was placed on file.

Legion Boxing Matches
If the Legion stages a few more programs like that of Tuesday evening we will have to change the title used on this department in the interests of accuracy, because the boxing matches were all fights from start to finish.

In the opener between Clarence Kuhlke of Appleton and George Weber of Menasha both boys were so anxious to mix that they were constantly tangled up and unable to land their punches. The second bout, between Gilbert Retter of Appleton and Howard Etherhold of Neenah, a former student at Lawrence, furnished the only real boxing, mixed in with real wallowing. Retter showed clever footwork and ducking, but was clearly outclassed by Etherhold.

The heavyweight bout between Frank Wegener and Hank Schults, both of Appleton, was a hard-fought affair which brought the fans to their feet, yelling with excitement. But it did not last long, as a wild swing laid Schults cold before the round was half gone.

The bout between Sammy Giancola of Milwaukee and Jack Lee of Ekel also ended in the first round when it became evident that Lee was hopelessly outclassed and the referee showed excellent judgment in stopping the bout. Lee, by no means cut, was unable to continue, but he needs more experience before tackling a man of Giancola's caliber.

Herbie Thompson of New London and Tony Bruno of Green Bay gave the fans a real treat. They settled into each other at the gong and never rested, both giving all they had and earning veritable gluttons for absorbing punishment. Thompson received the decision, but many of the fans thought a draw would have been fairer to both boys.

The wind-up, between Hans Ahl of Oshkosh and Andy Durr of Milwaukee, was another hair-raiser. Durr forced the fight from beginning to end, but had the better of the finishing and repeatedly floored his opponent. Durr was not in the least discouraged by knock-downs and kept coming back for more, the end coming when he was knocked out in the third round. Ahl had put up the same sort of fight against Windy Thomas last month that fight would never have gone to four rounds.

The representative of the state boxing commission was again very much out of evidence and his running late was a decided handicap to the boys unfortunate enough to draw the corner near which he sat.

Campus Comment

It is with regret that this column reports that Eddie Kotal is to leave Lawrence to take up a position with the Stevens Point Normal. During his years both as a student and a coach at the Viking Institute Kotal was a very popular figure and his loss will be very keenly felt both by students and faculty. The Lawrentian summed up the situation very keenly when they stated, "Stevens Point's gain is Lawrence's loss." So long Eddie, may you have the best of success in your new position.

The six weeks exams have been taking their toll of the students and a great deal of midnight oil has been used the past week as the college folks crammed for their respective quizzes.

Plans for a formal dance to be held in the old gym the night before school closes for the holidays are being formulated. Although the dance is billed as a formal affair informal dress will not be taboo.

Junior and senior pictures are now in the hands of the Aerial staff and will be placed in their proper positions in the book very shortly. It is reported by the staff that not all of the pictures are in and a warning has been issued to those who have been tardy in attending to the matter.

Members of the freshman class who are in the dramatic club presented a series of plays in chapel Wednesday and Tuesday afternoon. It is reported that a great deal of talent was uncovered among the yearlings.

Will cut it short this week until the exam reactions pass over but expect to be recovered by next Friday.

Rules and Etiquette of Golf
By Oscar Riches, Riverview Pro

Ball To Be Fairly Struck At The ball must be struck through the face of the club; not pushed, scraped or spoomed.

How To Drop a Ball A ball shall be dropped in the following manner: The player himself shall drop it. He shall face the hole, stand erect, and drop the ball behind him over his shoulder. If, in the act of dropping, the ball touch the player, shall incur no penalty, and, if it roll into a hazard, the player may again drop the ball without penalty.

A ball in play must not be touched before the hole is played out, except as provided for in the rules. Penalty for a breach of this rule shall be one stroke.

The player may, without penalty, touch his ball with the club in the act of addressing it, provided he does not move the ball. A ball in play may, with the opponent's consent, be lifted for the purpose of identification, but must be carefully replaced.

If the player's ball move out of the way of the green or in a hazard, the opponent, if he chooses, may drop the ball, without penalty, as near as possible to the place where his ball lay. But this must be done before another stroke is played by either side.

In playing through the green, irregularities of the surface, which could in any way affect the player's stroke, shall not be removed or pressed down by the player, his partner, or either of their caddies. A player is, however, always entitled to place his feet firmly on the ground when taking his stance.

RUSSELL SAGE DORMITORY
One of the best equipped and most beautiful college buildings in the middle west is Russell Sage Hall, dormitory for upper class women at Lawrence College. This modern and spacious dormitory was made possible by a gift from Mrs. Russell Sage, of New York, in memory of her husband.

It is built of crystalline limestone and was completed in 1917. Its fireproof construction combines safety and beauty and beauty throughout the entire building. There are rooms for 342 students with a dining room capable of seating two hundred.

Russell Sage Hall is the home of the Lawrence Dean of Women, Miss Margarette Woodworth. Upperclass women reside here under the supervision of their own governing association, headed by Miss Norma Balage, Lawrence senior.

Congress began its short session Monday at noon with thirteen new members in the house of representatives. It is predicted that it will be a stormy session because of several troublesome questions to be considered. In his message to congress on Tuesday President Hoover asked that unemployment relief and the economic situation generally receive first attention. Government services, national defense, foreign relations, social service, etc., to follow in turn. Whole floods of bills are pouring in.
