Free Greenville Man in Krueger Extortion Plot

Roland Hassinger, Greenville farmer who was arrested by Neenah police on Monday night as a suspect in a plot to extort $3,000 from Wausau's Neenah Hardware merchants, was released from custody Thursday evening when it became certain that his alibi was sound and when a second extortion letter was received by the Kruegers.

The first letter received Wednesday demanded that the Krueger men pay $3,000 in a bag, take the 11:17 Sico line train from Neenah and throw the parcel out the window from the left side of the train when it passed by Waupun.

Hassinger, serving a five year term for kidnapping a small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Webb of Neenah several years ago, Mrs. Webb is a niece of Mr. Krueger.

A dummy package was made up and M. W. Krueger threw it from the train at the crossing specified in the letter. Neenah police officers armed with a machine gun had stationed themselves at the crossing. Hassinger drove up to the crossing and waited for the train to pass. When he saw the package thrown from the train he got out of his car and walked over to pick it up. He was commanded to halt, but, according to his story, he became alarmed thinking he was being accosted by hold-up men and fled toward his car. The officers then fired several shots into Hassinger's car putting it out of commission and Hassinger then surrendered.

The second letter, mailed about noon in Neenah, gave additional credence to Hassinger's alibi. This missive changed the instructions contained in the first letter. It ordered the Kruegers to throw the package from the train near a bonfire along the right of way near Dari. The first letter was partly typewritten and partly printed. The second, which is being held by Neenah postal authorities, was printed in pencil.

No additional trace has been found of the writer of the missives since Hassinger's release, according to word late Friday morning from C. H. Watts, Neenah police chief.

George T. Prim, chief of police, has been appointed to the resolutions committee of the Wisconsin Knights of Columbus. Other members are P. J. Stone, Wausau, chairman; W. J. Nye, M. M.; J. Loe; R. J. Henneberry, Milwaukee; J. Levind, Park Falls; Votta Wabrats, Madison; and D. P. O'Connell, Hudson.

The committee will meet at Wausau May 9. The state convention will be held at Racine May 19 and 20.

County Board Opposed to Building of New Court House at Present

While none of the major problems before the present session of the Outagamie county board is new, long and heated arguments have followed their presentation, with only one of the three questions disposed of by Thursday night, the close of the third day.

The board on Wednesday, after a heated discussion, tabled the report of the highway committee which opposed the institution of an eight-hour day for employees in the highway department, and the payment of a wage equivalent to the union scale. The resolution was introduced by Supervisor Janzen of Rattle Chute at the February session and laid over for consideration to this session.

Immediately upon reading of the eight-hour day was discussed. He said no county in the state operates on this basis, and that it cannot be done without disturbing the present efficiency of the department. He urged the county not to jump into a new venture, and said this is the wrong time to raise wages. He did not advocate a cut, but opposed a raise. Explaining why the county cannot adopt the eight-hour day, he said mills and factories have done, the supervisor said these establishments are equipped with lighting facilities so that work on shifts is feasible, whereas county work must be done in daylight. He said the men in the department are satisfied, and that it is unwise to tamper with what is well.

The court house question was made a special order of business for Thursday morning. The report of the special committee, appointed at the February session of the board, with Clyde Clark as chairman, submitted its report which called for the building of a new court house.

The subject was revived Thursday by a strong appeal by Supervisor T. H. Ryan for the construction of a new court house.
the necessity for a new structure, but advocated deferring action. He suggested a plan whereby an appropriation of $50,000 annually would be set aside to ward a building fund, and then when a building would be择er, a new and favorable, a sizable amount had been set side, to proceed with a new structure.
Supervisor Buck told the board that the farmers, whose incomes are negligible, and the local school system, object to a building program at the present time. He intimated thet if the gas tax money is used to diminish
the present indebtedness of the county, outstanding bonds will soon be paid for and that it is unlikely that such a time would look favorably
upon the project favorably.
Supervisor Powers, an ardent supporter of an immediate building pro-garm, reminded the board that two years ago he asked for a referendum in the court house question: "If we started today," he said, "we would need six months in which to have plans prepared and approved. Two years would be consumed in construction work and there would be five years during which nothing would have been paid on the principal. I believe if the voters thoroughly understood the matter, they would vote for a new building."
Several other supervisors entered the discussion, all agreeing that a new structure should be erected in preference to patching up and building onto the old one, but that the time has not arrived for that step. The report of the special committee, with suggested deferring action on a new building and proposing a plan for an addition with recommendation for its construction, was adopted. No course of action was defined and a call was made upon Thursday, but statements from the supervisors indicated building would be deferred.
Practically the entire afternoon ses-tion Thursday was taken up with a discussion of dance hall ordinances. The dance hall committee reported that it had conferred with officials of Calumet and Winnebago counties and both groups failed to cooperate with Outagamie county in increasing the effectiveness of the ordinance. Frank B. Kees, dis-ter attorney for Winnebago county, called upon to discuss the operation of the Winnebago county ordiance. He told the board members that the ordinance should be based on sane

and reasonable operation, but that no ordinance should be enacted which is passed with the mental reservations that certain sections will not be enforced. He referred to the number of roadhouses that have sprung up in the outlying communities, claiming that since the advent of the repeal of the state prohibition law the situation in many instances has become intolerable and needs attention. Old dilapidated places for which $15 a month would be a high rental fee have been leased to roadhouse operators for fabulous rents, he declared, claiming the owners of these premises are as guilty of violating the law as the operators themselves. He told his audience that Winnebago county rigidly enforces the law pertaining to disorderly roadhouses, and that the state law provides for a search of such places to determine their status. He urged a rock-pile for persons committed to jail, instead of comfortable quarters in a jail where the prisoners could entertain themselves with cards. Pleading for reasonable en-facement of an ordinance, which is not simply puritanical and aimed to deprive the citizens of their liberties, the dis-ter attorney advised against passage of a law which the sponsors do not expect to observe. Several amendments to the dance hall ordinance passed at the November session were laid over to Friday.
The board adopted a report favoring the widening of Seventh, Elm and Walnut streets around the court house,
and ordered a copy of the resolution dispatched to the city officials. John C. Ryan was re-appointed a member of the board of appeals. The board went on record as opposed to any change in distribution of utility taxes and also opposed to the proposed system which would create a general coun-cy school and board committee and abolish all district committees.

Grounds about the Greenville Orme-gle hall were beautified this week when about fifteen members held a "planting bee"
and set out about two hundred trees and shrubs. Native plants were used so that the expense of landscaping the grounds was comparatively small. Plans were prepared by Dr. Franz Aust of the horticultural department of the University of Wisconsin. W. C. Williams was chairman of the committee, and Ous Sell, county agricultural agent, assisted

IT'S A WISE COUNCIL THAT SAYS 'NO'

Practice of self denial is as good for a city as for an individual when it is a matter of paying up old bills and getting back to an even footing. Mayor John Goodland's "No" to the incoming common council is appropriate to the city's financial situation.

It is not as easy for a municipal governing body to say "No" to the demands for city expenditures and a firm policy takes courage. The officials who court unpopularity by their stand deserve a great deal of credit. For the time being they may be the target of abuse, but if the city a year hence has retrieved its bank loans, has its bills paid and a clean slate to start with, ill feeling will dissipate quickly.

When it is a case of spending other people's money, there is a tendency to be more liberal. Likewise, in a city government, the constituents are in close personal contact with their representatives. The people of a ward can wear out an alderman's doorstep with persistent demands for improvements, until the official finally is forced to yield. In state or national government, the contact is more remote and the people's dislikes are not heaped personally upon those who deny such requests.

It will help the new council a great deal if the public will recognize the wisdom of another year of curtailment of improvements. If the people will take the attitude that the city can get along for a year or two without additional paving, sewer extensions, the proposed incinerator, new buildings, extensive street oiling and other heavy drains on the municipal funds, the council will respond willingly and concentrate its attention on the reduction of maintenance expenses and the more efficient purchasing system suggested by the mayor. Public sentiment of this kind is a distinct help to a group of men trying to meet the wishes of those whom they serve.

Unemployment exists in Appleton as in other cities, but not in a measure that demands the release of public funds for lavish improvements. The summer and fall seasons are productive of more jobs than the winter period and the city can safely forego expansion for the time being so as to make further gains on its financial readjustment. Should conditions change, the council will not make the situation any more convenient if the funds have been preserved in the meantime.

There is no more advantageous time than the present to establish the office of city comptroller, and to adopt an iron-clad budget that cannot be exceeded. This plan has been talked about for years, because it removes one of the principal weaknesses in financial administration. The proper city budget is only an estimate of the expenditures for twelve months ahead. Departments continually exceed the amount allotted them, because the council appropriates money left and right without ascertaining whether the budgeted amount has been spent. Near the close of the fiscal year, heavy borrowing usually starts. The new year begins with a deficit, and the council in the face of such a situation, may have to take care of the excesses as well as the needs of the future.

Under a controlled budget plan, the council could not exceed the amount allotted any department. The comptroller would be obligated to keep an accurate record showing the balances in various funds so the council would know just how much money it could spend. There would be no day of reckoning at the end of each year for moneys appropriated beyond what was in the treasury.

This system would ease the way for the aldermen in dealing with the demands of their constituents. Requests could be denied with good grace when it were known that the budget had been exhausted. The public would readily understand and would see the necessity of waiting until money was available for the particular things wanted.

It behooves the council to take advantage of the economy complex abroad everywhere now, and adopt the comptroller system. The measure would go through with little opposition. In times of prosperity and liberal spending, neither the council nor the public like to be restrained. The attitude is different now and a great deal of credit would redound to the present administration if it could point to this enactment as one of its accomplishments.

GOVERNMENT BY THE COMMON PEOPLE

Students of politics are following the activities of the Wisconsin legislature this year with greater interest than in many past sessions. It is a time when theories are being converted into laws and when their application will be made to the life and activities of the people of the state.

For years Progressivism has been gaining strength. The conservative Republicans have been virtually on the defensive to save their organization and their following. Each legislature has found a less pronounced division of power, with the Progressives increasing and the Conservatives decreasing.

This time the Progressives achieved their long anticipated goal. Gov. Philip La Follette was placed at the head of the state regime. The control in both the assembly and the senate is in the hands of the Progressives. Likewise all the major state offices are filled by this group, and important appointments are favored much the same way.

There is in power then in Wisconsin a political group which can legislate at will according to its own principles and aspirations. The program in favor of state-owned public utilities is an example. No Conservative legislature would enact such laws because industry's strength depends on this group. Nothing can stop final passage by the Progressives; however. Much legislation benefitting the laborer and the farmer also is making its way onto the statute books. Likewise, there is a further shifting of taxation in favor of the little fellow and onto the shoulders of those having the larger earnings and the wealth.

This biennium is the heyday in legislation for the common people. It is their opportunity to fulfill wishes of many years standing. Their party is in power. What may happen before the session closes perhaps worries the capitalist element and the sigh of relief will be breathed when adjournment finally comes.

There is little doubt the changes in the law will be more sweeping and far-reaching, and literally radical than in any session for years.

Progressives have promised much from this demonstration of its effectiveness or will legislate itself out of power because it has gone too far. Perhaps Progressivism might even be accepted by the skeptics. Who knows what the scene will be like after the smoke of legislative battle clears away?

Our next two legal holidays come on Saturday, meaning double holidays again. We dread the motor accident reports of those two weekends. It would be a good idea to give the whole highway to the driver trying to take a two weeks' trip in two days.

We keep something handy these days in haven at the egg who begins to talk about another hard winter ahead. Let us get through spring and summer first. There may be sunshine enough to last.

Those who roll up their sleeves instead of turning up their noses are the most apt to succeed these days, says B. C. Forbes.

Mayor stresses need of continued economy in address to new council.

Economy was the keynote of Mayor John Goodland's address to the new city council who held its first formal session Wednesday night, two weeks ago after the April 9 general election. At that time, the councilmen were seated. C. O. Davis of the first ward, who succeeds George H. Packard, and Wenzel Hassman of the fifth ward, successor to W. H. Vanderdelen, were installed.

In a terse address, the mayor emphasized his slogan, "Reduce the indebtedness of the city." He pointed to the fact that a year ago when he assumed office, as mayor of Appleton there were $280,000 in bonds outstanding and that it was necessary to borrow money with which to conduct municipal business, at the first meeting of the year. The city debt was $250,000. During the year that indebtedness was cut in two, the 28 councillors, the mayor said, was expected to wipe out the balance. The only way in which it can be done is via the path of economy, he added. In contrast to financial status of the city, the beginning of the new council year and the expenditures, the executive declared loan will not be necessary until in July. He reminded the councillors, also, that interest that amounts to approximately $33 a day on the large loan of last year, was paid. When the new trend for new went into office a year ago there were many outstanding bills. This year there are none beyond current expenses and the treasury has a balance of $124,562.

The largest undertaking of the year, the mayor said, is the re-assessment. He pointed to the urgent need for this re-evaluation, stating that the city had never had a re-assessment and that too much had been expected of the assessors. The city had been drifting along until assessments ran rampant and many inequalities were evident. The work of re-evaluating the city, he said, is being done under supervision of the state tax commission. He urged the councillors to assist in clarifying the erroneous impression that exists in relation to the real estate. A description of each parcel of property is being taken by the field men, the mayor explained, who will turn this information over to the assessors. A data sheet for each property will eliminate errors. The reassessment, he concluded, is one of the biggest things that has been attempted in the city in many years.

Briefly the mayor discussed the National Fire Underwriters' report. He said all figures made in the report cannot be carried out immediately, though eventually all such recommendations will be realized. He advised against hasty action, and cited figures submitted by Joseph Plank, of the latter company. The report said Appleton had 610 hydrants as against 369 in Fond du Lac, a larger city, and 522 at Janesville, a smaller city. Appleton has 356 valves compared to 50 at Fond du Lac and 609 at Janesville, and in this city the fire engines run 15 miles of mains, at Fond du Lac 51 miles, and at Janesville 43. The report, he said, would make Appleton an "ideal city." The community is a good insurance city, Mayor Goodland asserted. Insurance premiums totaling $600,000 are paid annually by Appleton residents. However, he said, the report was something for the fire and water commission to study.

Fire runs outside the city was another topic discussed. This problem was of major sayld, but no action has been taken. He expressed his opinion that it was unfair to expect this service to be rendered to residents outside the city limits, who, he said, are required to bear the tax, and those who do not. Each run, he said, costs about $250 and unless communities outside the city borders pay for this service, it should not be granted. He said he believed annexation to the city proper of these towns would result if it advantages enjoyed by citizens were denied persons living outside Appleton's domain.

Unemployment Problem

Unemployment is one of the most difficult problems the new council probably will meet this year. Mayor Goodland declared. He stated that whatever had been saved in the snow months had been farmers of the poor department. Unless conditions improve before winter, a serious problem faces the community. Wages will go down, he said, if conditions do not improve, and with taxes and rents must go down. This probability demands strict adherence to budgets. Ten members of the council, who held over from last year, pledged themselves to an economy program, the mayor said, and he urged them to abide by that promise. It may be necessary, he continued, to cut the levy in order to reduce taxes that homesteaders will be able to pay. Councillors must learn to say "no,"

Mayor Goodland urged that city officials not be allowed to attend national conventions this year. Street department maintenance was reduced by $50,000 last year, the chief of the Appleton public works said, and it would be cut even more this year. He said the city officials have learned much about purchasing, and that prices will be bought on small items as well as large amounts. This principle, he said, would be applied also in the poor department.

Urging action on the petition of the Appleton Trades and Labor Council for an ordinance providing for the use of home labor, the mayor called attention to the fact that such an ordinance is specified in several present city contracts.

Retaining Appleton Industries

A contract committee, which would endeavor to retain manufacturing plants considering removal from the city, and make an effort to secure location of additional plants in the city, was recommended in the mayor's program. He pleaded for informal meetings where city affairs could be discussed openly and continuously as a way of preparation for action in executive sessions. He invited conferences with the aldermen, declining under standing eliminated difficulty and closed his address to the new council with a plea for cooperation and teamwork.

Several changes in the rules of the council were presented and adopted. Supervisor P. H. Ryan, who is ill, was unable to attend the April session of the county board and asked the council to appoint a substitute for him. Upon recommendation of the second ward alderman, Frank P. Young was chosen temporary supervisor from the second ward.

Recommendation for a storm sewer extension in Bollaire park was referred to the street and bridge committee, and a report recommending the allotment of space now used in the fire department to the police department, the installation of an air line and water system in the room, was adopted. With most of the business held over to the May session, the council adjourned until tonight, when a hearing will be held on the paving projects, for which bids were recently received.

Skippy comes from living pattern

There is a real living and breathing, in-the-flesh "Skippy," who, while he could not possibly appear in the Paramount picture version of this famous syndicate feature, opening Monday at the Fox theatre, nevertheless has imbued the screen with all the realism of life permitted by his age and size.

The one-and-only, real "Skippy," according to close friends, is none other than Percy Crosby, cartoonist whose faithful pen and ready wit have made "Skippy" in newspaper form a national favorite.

But Crosby is thirty-six years old and nearly six feet tall.
If they try to get funny while you’re here with me—”

Sabra, glancing at the group from beneath her shielding hat brim, did see that they were behaving very much like a lot of snickering schoolboys who are preparing to let fly a bombardment of snowballs, an air of secret mischief about.

“Why are they—what do you think makes them?—” Sabra began, a trifle nervously.

“I can’t say for sure. But I suspect that there has been a little monkey business about the place. Pegler! Who is—oh, isn’t it the man—the editor—the one who was found dead—shot dead—outside the Yancey house yesterday morning?—”

“Why do you say it—exactly—exactly? They know more than is comfortable, even for these parts. I was inquiring around last night, and everyone acts up like a clam. I’m going to find out who killed Pegler and take the first number of the Oklahoma Whip.”

“Toss, Yancey! Yancey, I’m frightened!” she clung tighter to his arm. The glaring, winkle-free face of the man on the saloon porch seemed to take on the fanged and snarling muzzles of wolves in a pack.

“Nothing to be frightened of, hon. They know me. I’m no Pegler they can scare.” They don’t like my white hat, that’s the truth of it—here comes last night down at the Sunny South saloon to wear it this morning. Just to try me out—well, they got the guts to come out in the open—”

The sentence never was finished. Sabra heard a curse in front of Pegler past her ear. Something sang—Yancey’s white sombrero went spinning into the dust of the street.

Sabra’s mouth opened as though she were screaming, but the sounds she would have emitted, feeble, as a croak. “Stay where you are,” Yancey ordered, his voice low and even. The dirty dog.” She stood transfixed. She could not have run if she wanted to. Yancey stood immovable, face to face with the man who had followed the car up the street, surveyed it, and reached to ward his pocket for his laced chaps.

Yancey, now half turned toward the crowd on the street behind the car, turned his laced chaps up the street, surveyed it, and reached to ward his pocket for his laced chaps. He stood transfixed. She could not have run if she wanted to. Yancey took a laced chaps up the street, surveyed it, and reached to ward his pocket for his laced chaps. She could not have run if she wanted to. What Shall We Have For Dinner Today?

VARIETY IN MEAT COURSES

Have you gotten into a rut of sameness in preparing meats? Here is one way out.

Avail yourselves of the great variety of meats, economical and rich in food values, offered in the meat sections of the more progressive meat shops in the city. Familiarize yourselves with some of the less used portions of our standard food animals and learn to use them to their full advantage, releasing your family from the eternal round of steaks, chops, roasts and stews.

How often do you use livers (chicken, rabbit, veal, beef, pork, or fish livers), hearts and kidneys? They are all rich in food value, high in protein and delicate in flavor. Why not serve them more often? Kidneys are low in cost than many of the cuts we serve habitually and now used in the treatment of certain organic disorders. Perhaps some of you are like the woman who asked her doctor how she could cook tongue. She hadn't known how. Tongues could be cooked and eaten, much less that there are so many delectable ways of preparing them for the table. And yet she had catered for her family for nearly twenty years.

Like all close-textured—solid—meats, these require careful cooking to be at their tenderest and most palatable.

Broiled Lamb's Kidneys

These being small and delicate are best when broiled, although they may be used in a stew or other ways. Remove the thin skin and with a sharp knife cut from the outer edge almost to the center, remove it. Place the kidney, skin side up, in a dry pan and keep it from curling. Brush with melted shortening and broil about five minutes, turning two or three times. Serve on toast garnished with crisp slices of bacon, allowing two kidneys for each serving. Season when done (as with all broiled meats) with salt, pepper and a bit of lemon juice, if liked. Or roll in seasoned flour and pan broil.

Beef Kidneys

These, being larger, are better adapted to stewing, deviled dishes, and meat pies. To prepare them for any of the dishes into which they may enter, cut crosswise into slices and remove the white membranous tissue in the center. Soak in cold water for an hour, discard the water. Then they are ready to cook.

Meat and Kidney Pie

Cut 1 1/2 lbs. round steak into thin strips; prepare 1 beef kidney as directed above. Place it on a plate 2 lbs. flour, 1 tsp. salt, 1/3 tsp. pepper. Dip each piece of steak and kidney into this and form into rolls with the kidney in the center. Place in a baking dish, sprinkle over them, if liked, a diced onion and a diced carrot, fill dish two-thirds with cold water, cover and bake slowly for one hour.

In the meantime prepare pastry or biscuit dough, roll out, cover meat with this crust and return to the oven for half an hour. This may be served hot or cold. If you want to make a one-dish meal of this, add potatoes cut in large cubes and cook with the meat.

Hearts

To prepare these for baking, smoothing, or baking, wash in lukewarm water to which 1 tsp. of baking soda has been added. Remove blood clots and cut away the tough muscle and veins. Place in cold water for an hour. Blend 2 cups stale bread crumbs with 1 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. pepper, 1 large minced onion, 1 tsp. minced parsley, 1 tsp. poultry dressing, and about 3 tbsp. melted shortening. Moisten with egg and milk, if necessary. Stuff the prepared heart and tie oily paper over the stuffing. Place in deep dish with 1 cup hot water and 2 tbsp. bacon fat in moderate oven (about 2 to 1 1/4 hours according to size), basting frequently. Before it is quite finished the paper may be removed. Serve very hot with a brown gravy or tomato sauce.

The smaller hearts, or kidneys too, may be carefully boiled, then cubed and heated in brown gravy. Smother in tomato sauce and bake, or prepare in other ways which you may devise for each kidney of each.

Mack Named Chairman of Board for Fifth Time

Mike Mack, supervisor from Shiocton, was elected chairman of the county board for the fifth successive term when the board convened at the courthouse Tuesday morning. Anton Jensen, supervisor from Little Chute, was re-elected vice chairman.

The session opened with sharp criticism of the state legislators for their attempts to strip town and villages of funds the board believes should be retained by them. Supervisor Jensen, who led the discussion, urged towns and cities to fight for their rights. Bills proposing to take from municipalities income tax receipts and providing for compulsory employment of county electrical inspectors, came in for special scorn. County Clerk John E. Halverson was instructed to wire the board's sentiments to the legislative committee.

Assemblyman Oscar Shimeke was instructed to oppose the measure creating a county electrical inspector. Supervisors Laubs, Jensen and Burduch were named on a special committee to investigate bills which might prove derogatory to various districts.

Knowing Our Children Better

By Edith D. Dixon

Children Like To Earn

Practically all children like to earn money because it gives them a feeling of independence to have money to spend or to save. The expectation which the child experiences is akin to that of the adult who is financially independent.

Once the child has tasted the joy of being self-supporting, he is unwilling voluntarily to become dependent. This urge to be self-supporting appears in the teens and arouses a desire in the mind of many children to leave school to earn money. Sometimes it is difficult to tide over this period and convince the child that more education will, in the long run, be not only an asset but essential to earning capacity.

In towns and smaller communities a common way of making money is having a newspaper route or a job as an errand boy on Saturdays in a local store. In some cases parents take for their own use some or all of the money earned by the child.

Henry earns $30 a month on his paper route," said one mother, "but I take every cent, for otherwise it goes right through his fingers."

Cast 32 Ballots for City Home Keeper and Matron

Though it was necessary to ballot on applications for appointive offices from two to thirty-two times, all but two former city appointive employees were retained by the new council, which held its first regular session in the council chambers Tuesday evening. The most exciting contests were in the appointments for poor commissioner and city home keeper and matron. Five formal ballots were taken before W. L. Lyon gained a majority in the poor commissioner, and a three-cornered race between Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Becher, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hart, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Otto was not ended until the third and second formal ballots gave Becher the majority necessary to put him into office. Becher and Hart continued to poll five and six votes alternately, with the odd vote going to Otto. Several times a tie occurred between eight and five votes each and two for Otto.

Offices for which there was no opposition were those of city clerk, city physician, and weigh master.

A novelty was brought into the contests in several instances where there were but two candidates, each having received an equal number of votes on the informal ballot. This situation occurred in the case of building inspector when John N. Weland, incumbent, and William Campbelle each received six votes. The formal ballot gave Weland eleven votes to Campbelle’s one. On the informal ballot Theodore Albrecht, incumbent, and Frank Bartz each were given six votes for the office of street commissioner. The result of the formal ballot was ten votes for Albrecht against two for Bartz.

Mayor John Goodland cast the deciding vote in the street commissioner. On the first formal ballot six votes each were accorded to Henry Frank, incumbent, and Frank VandenBoogard. The mayor cast his vote for VandenBoogard.

Three formal ballots were taken to select a plumbing inspector with George E. Gauslin, incumbent, maintaining a slight lead until the final vote put him into office. Other applicants were John H. Bauer, Fred W. Wise and Raymond Childs.

Three applications were filed for the office of city engineer. Robert M. Connely, a former city engineer, and Omar W. White sought the job in opposition to L. M. Schindler, incumbent. Schindler polled ten votes on the first formal ballot.

Six applicants sought the office of poor commissioner. They were E. A. Tesch, A. W. Zerbel, W. L. Lyons, E. G. Schueler, Michael Jacobo, and P. G. Schwartz. Mr. Lyons, incumbent, was elected on the fifth ballot.

Philip Vogt, alderman from the Sixth ward, was elected president of the council. On the first formal ballot Vogt received four votes, George Richards one, and Charles D. Thompson six. On the second ballot, Vogt polled seven votes Walter Gmeiner one, D. C. Thompson four.

Robert E. McMillan was elected a member of the city plan commission; Harvey Kittner and Wenzel Hassman, members of the board of health; and Mike Steinhauer, a member of the library board.

Appointive offices are city clerk—Carl Becher; city engineer—L. M. Schindler; building inspector, John N. Weland; plumbing inspector, George E. Gauslin; city physician, Dr. F. P. Dooley; poor commissioner, W. L. Lyon; sealers of weights and measures—Joseph A. Hodgins; weigh master, Albert Robedoot; city home keeper and matron, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Becher; street commissioner, Theodore Albrecht; and jester, Frank VandenBoogard.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Rooney, 317 N. Durkee street, Wednesday at St. Elizabeth hospital.

Mayor Reviews Work of Old City Council

With W. L. VanderHeyden, alderman from the Fifth ward, absent, the old city council held its final session Wednesday, transacting only a little minor business and referring all matters in the hands of council committees to similar committees of the new council.

Paul Noffke and Julius Krause were granted walk builders licensees, and permission was granted to the Holy Name society to decorate the streets on the line of march of the Holy Name convention parade held in Appleton May 31. A communication from C. G. Cannon, attorney for the William Tesch estate, concerning repairs on the sidewalk alongside the Tesch property on Washington street was referred to the street and bridge committee, and a communication from the Chicago and Northwestern railroad in regard to donation of a strip of land necessary for widening Memorial drive was laid over until the May session of the council. An ordinance providing for inserting a provision of $70 per month for bridge tenders in the salary ordinance was referred to the ordinance committee and ordered published.

Alderman Packard, the only alderman of the two who are retiring, present, gave a short farewell address, in which he thanked his colleagues for courtesies extended during his incumbency and extended his hope for success to the new council.

Mayor Goodland closed the last session of the old council with a brief review of accomplishments of the year. He referred to the contrast of conditions now and a year ago. When the mayor took office a year ago he stated there were but $18,000 in the treasury with a large amount of unpaid bills due. At the close of the year all bills are paid and there is a sum of $124,500 on hand, leaving a net gain during the year of $106,500.

There was a difference in expenditures of $13,000 in favor of the year 1928 over 1929, the mayor said. He commended the council on its attempt to get the city back on a better financial basis.

A. J. Genisse has called a meeting of the retail division of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce for Monday afternoon. A communication in regard to decorations by the Lions club in connection with the celebration on May 15 observing the anniversary of the Treaty of the Cedars, a suggestion by the advertising club for a cooperative event this summer; and a merchants and manufacturing exposition are to be discussed.

Miss Ethel M. Hillburg, deputy income tax collector of the Milwaukee office, will be stationed permanently in Appleton. Quarters will be provided for her in the new federal building when it is completed. She will be temporarily located in the council chambers at the city hall.
