New Iron Bridge.

Perry & Allen’s Eureka Iron Bridge is a new invention by the above named gentlemen, citizens of Beloit. The structure is composed of a series of rods of iron, either tubular or solid, of nearly equal size and length, thus equalizing contraction and expansion which has never been accomplished by any other method. They also use material at its full size without cutting away any part of it. It has no superfluous or dead weight to support, every piece contributing to the general support of the whole structure. It is firmly held by clamps and nuts, so there is no shake or rattle about it.

A few advantages over other bridges are: 1st, contraction and expansion equalized; 2nd, It is not affected by atmospheric influences; 3rd, A greater amount of strength is obtained from the same amount of material; 4th, It can be built cheaper than any other, as they dispense with most all of the mechanical labor.

As this bridge is a new invention, we are unable to report what the facilities for its manufacture will be, but experienced men have decided that it will take the preference of all other bridges, and prove the greatest invention of the west.

This is an old and established firm, having done business in Beloit for a number of years; we can unhesitatingly say that no firm in the city has won the entire confidence of the people more than the above named gentlemen; their store is neat and well arranged, and always supplied with a full stock of fancy and staple groceries. They strive to sell goods as low as possible, and of good quality, at the same time accommodate their customers to the full extent of their ability, and by this means have secured many friends and patrons. J. B. Cory, Physician and Surgeon.

Dr. Cory graduated from the University of Michigan Medical College in the spring of 1861, previous to which he attended medical lectures at Rush Medical College Chicago, and chemical lectures at the Mercy Hospital, the Marine Hospital, and City Hospital of Chicago.

He has for ten years past been in active and successful practice of his profession in Patch Grove, where he has many warm and valued friends.

In January 1873, by the suffrages of the people he became a member of the State Legislature, and discharged the duties of that position in an honorable and creditable manner, being appointed by Speaker Hall one of the committee on the temperance bill, besides being on several other important committees. After the adjournment of the legislature he decided to locate in this city, owing to its superior literary, religious and social advantages; and formed a partnership with Dr. Brenton. Dr. Cory does a general practice, but has paid particular attention to obstetrics and the diseases of women and children.

Persons wishing to secure the services of a well qualified physician who is also a gentleman, need have no hesitation in applying to him.
