a classical school in Alexandria, Genesee County; read law in Buffalo, and commenced the practice of his profession at Milwaukee in 1846; was elected district attorney of Milwaukee County soon after he located in Milwaukee, and held that appointment for three terms, or six years. He once allowed his name to be used for member of the Assembly, and took his place as such for one winter, and is still in full practice of his profession.

The subject of this sketch, who has always stood high in his profession, was once pressed by his friends to run for the place of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, but declined the honor intended by his friends. As an adviser in matters involving intricate law points, and as an advocate before a jury, few could if any, be found, superior to Mr. Butler.

JAMES G. JENKINS.

James G. Jenkins was born in New York in 1834; came to Wisconsin in 1857; was city attorney of Milwaukee for four years; president of the Young Mens' Association; member of the board of School Commissioners: and is now practicing at his profession, as a lawyer.

As a young lawyer, Mr. Jenkins has considerable practice; is remarkable for his quickness in taking advantage of any favourable point that might incidently arise in the course of a trial; sticking with unflinching pertinacity to his own objections and arguments; and only yielding to his opponent, when everything that ingenuity and legal knowledge could suggest, is entirely exhausted.

H. A. STARR

of Milwaukee was born at Leroy, Geneva County, New York, November 21st, 1831, and came to Milwaukee in 1836. From 1846 till 1850, he was engaged in printing in the Milwaukee Sentinel office with his father, and with Messrs. Wilson and King. When his father, Elisha Starr, was appointed Post Master, he acted with him, as assistant Post Master till his removal. In 1851 he embarked with his father in the book and job printing business, under the firm known as Starr and Son and was actively engaged in the trade till the rebellion, when he raised a company for the 1st Wisconsin Infantry in July 1861 at his own expense, and remained with the regiment till promoted to the rank of Major in 20th Wisconsin Infantry, July 3d, 1862.
