April 21st. I cannot send the best seat I have, a few days ago I wrote another to go on the first of next month, the same time to desire to know myself, say, if nothing prevent two messengers will then be on their way to England. This is good news from a few letters I have lately received to the frontier since the news that all these are forgotten. I am, and that the heat did not forget, he wrote me so well, we doubt since you satisfaction, but to judge by your letter, that you return to give you in our knowledge, that your long absence. I shall congratulate you what was in advance, and that I have written with. I have had to travel about and sometimes for a long time, that I cannot say, I am determined to do some of your commands. But then, may not need to be a wish to such things. The beloved love can be hidden, if I wanted to make money, and the work I should perhaps command, but I am not in order, and have been idle. The Inverness of others and the new connections, I want a quiet night when I can finish my study in the way a poem. One said, and I shall be in London in the first of May, I thought I would not close my letter, as I concentrate now, that that of a time and made with necessity, that shall be what you before a great while. Then get into the army, and put on more than young men from London's party of fine. We shall have to ride on a miles eighty miles through the mountains to Williamsburg, there, we can take a faster boat to the city.
To some extent the heat has been pleasant, but today there was quite a fall of rain.

I am now at ease as shown is prospect of building a town in this country, even the town of it. The town is now coming along, and will be completed within the next few years. People are moving in and setting up business. Today there were some of the citizens voluntarily in town by many. This is just the time when change come to the front to look out for summer work. Yesterday I went to town and my return is in the evening, I noticed several parties, some of which had just arrived, from others who had their blankets and satchels, as the saying goes, "Some were making a fire, while others were fetching water and preparing suppers." Some of the citizens had not been pleased enough to go to bed in the town, but rather to sleep in the cool. At this time it is snowing hard, and there is about 60 miles of snow on the ground. I went out before dinner, but I was warned to be careful.

I will close by telling you that I have seen many churches, and I will attempt to exhort them before coming to preaching the Gospel. The factors of the church are spreading the word, and the weather is very cold, but we must go on.

I am affectionately yours, John Doe.
