White, Smith & Co.'s New and Popular Songs!

GOING LIKE WILDFIRE!

Zara, the Gypsy.

WORDS AND MUSIC
BY C. A. WHITE.

Sung by Annie Plaxton with great success.

A gypsy has no care,—
Beware! I'm a gypsy maid,
From the mountain glade,
With a heart as free as a babbling rill;
'Neath the forest shades,
When the sunlight fades,
There I hear the night-bird's trill.

CHORUS.
Come, love, sweet love,
This is the song he's singing,
Come back! Come back!
Sorrow my heart is wringing!
Joy shall be thine
If thou be mine,—
Come, for I am lonely waiting.
No love be mine—
I am a maiden free!
A gypsy has no care,—
Beware! I've a happy home
In the mountain glade,
Where the hawthorn blooms and the wild rose fades,
Where the eagle soars
With his feathered throng,
Where the lone bird sings his song.

Waltz, arranged by C. D. Blake, 30 cts.

EVANGELINE!

WORDS AND MUSIC
BY C. A. White.

The Famous Composer of "When the Leaves begin to Turn," which has sold by Millions, and is familiar wherever the English language is spoken or sung.

New Songs by C. A. White.

A New Song. — Lively and Catchy!

Blessed are they who sing praises.

Marguerite! Marguerite! My star of hope,
I dread the day you'll forget me, Marguerite;
And still I know it soon will come,
The festive dance, the rich, the gay,
So different from our home, Marguerite.
I would not chide thee, chide thee, Marguerite,
Nor mar one joy of thy sweetest;
But oh, I dread that dreary day
You'll forget, Marguerite.

A Song for Fun.

Marguerite! Marguerite! My star of hope,
I dread the day you'll forget me, Marguerite;
And still I know it soon will come,
The festive dance, the rich, the gay,
So different from our home, Marguerite.
I would not chide thee, chide thee, Marguerite,
Nor mar one joy of thy sweetest;
But oh, I dread that dreary day
You'll forget, Marguerite.

A BEAUTIFUL OPERETTA.

The Berry Pickers!

A new and original Operetta in two Acts, adapted to the use of young people, and designed to illustrate scenes in country life. Amateur Clubs, Singing Classes, Sunday Schools, and professional singers, will find "The Berry Pickers" to be just what they have long been looking for. The music is by E. H. Bailey, one of the most popular American composers, and the libretto is by W. H. Putnam, a well-known writer. One hundred and four pages. Price, 75 cents.
