

100 Washington Street: This was the home and office of Dr. Kendall, originally located on the corner of Water and Washington. It was moved circa 1935 to the rear of the lot facing Washington Street when William Jenewein built the filling station. It is now an apartment house.

315 Washington: This home was built about 1890 by Edwin Farr. It was a cream brick home with ornate cornice and frieze and window details. It has since been covered with stucco. Other owners have been Edwin Perkins, Fred Albertus, and Roy Peterson.
